Message

Nepal’s diplomacy became more proactive, dynamic and result-oriented in the year 2018-2019. Within the broad parameters of Nepal's foreign policy, as defined by the Constitution of Nepal, the country’s external relations were directed towards elevating Nepal’s stature in the world and creating a supportive external environment for rapid socio-economic transformation based on the principles of sovereign equality, mutual respect and benefit. Nepal continued to pursue an independent and balanced foreign policy to promote national interest on the basis of the charter of the UN, non-alignment, Panchasheel, international law, and norms of world peace.

Nepal has taken a number of initiatives on the foreign policy front since the formation of the present government in February 2018. A balanced approach in external dealings, substantial growth in bilateral engagements and expansion of diplomatic relations have not only earned Nepal tremendous goodwill, support and cooperation from the neighbours and international community but also yielded positive outcomes in several important areas of common interests. I believe, these initiatives will make substantive contribution to our national resolve for graduating from an LDC status at an early date, becoming a middle-income country by 2030, and ultimately realizing the national aspiration of Prosperous Nepal, Happy Nepali.

The age-old and multi-dimensional friendly relations between Nepal and India have further deepened and widened. Bilateral engagements at various levels, including at the level of top leadership, helped foster mutual trust and understanding, and partnership for shared benefit. The Prime Ministers of Nepal and India held three meetings since the present Government came to power.

Similarly, Nepal’s relations with China have grown through advancement of co-operation in multiple areas based on goodwill, trust, understanding, appreciation of each other's aspirations and sensitivities. The year also witnessed steady momentum in the exchange of high-level visits, bilateral meetings and consultations. The President of Nepal paid a historic state visit to China, the first of its kind after the county became republic.

We achieved substantial progress in further expanding and strengthening bilateral cooperation with countries in the extended neighbourhood, major powers of the world, development partners, destination countries for overseas employment, and other friendly countries.

Exchange of high-level visits and increased interactions with international community enhanced Nepal’s image and promoted her interest. The Ministry was deeply engaged in arranging high-level visits, both outgoing and incoming, which proved to be beneficial and productive.

Nepal continued playing an active role in regional forums. As the Chair of both SAARC and BIMSTEC, Nepal engaged constructively for making these regional forums effective in achieving their objectives. Nepal successfully hosted the 4th BIMSTEC Summit in Kathmandu on 30-31 August 2018 and handed over the chairmanship to Sri Lanka. We also mobilized diplomatic capital towards reviving the stalled SAARC Summit, including through the informal meeting of SAARC Foreign/External Affairs Ministers.

Nepal stood firm for regional and international peace and security, protection and promotion of human rights, and achievement of sustainable development. We continued advocating for upholding multilateralism and rules-based international order for a peaceful, stable and prosperous world order where all nations, big or small, enjoy equal rights and fulfil their respective obligations in good faith. Nepal’s flagship contribution to UN peacekeeping operations continued with our standing as the fifth largest troops contributing country. We played constructive, impartial, and objective role in the UN Human Rights Council. We shared our experiences of home-grown and nationally-led peace process with other countries of world undergoing similar type of conflicts.

The Ministry established a Brain Gain Centre to encourage Nepali diaspora to contribute to the development of the country through their knowledge, skills, resources and technology.

We decided to establish a permanent biennial dialogue forum, Sagarmatha Sambaad, a flagship programme of its own kind, with a view to bringing together global leaders, policy makers, business entrepreneurs, civil society, academia, women and youth from around the world for a free, frank and interactive dialogue on burning global issues, such as climate change, migration, social development, among others. The Ministry and Missions abroad are working to make the Visit Nepal Year, 2020 a success.

We organized a National Dialogue on Foreign Policy to develop common understanding on Nepal’s foreign policy. The broader participation and substantive deliberations have contributed to forge consensus among the major political parties and stakeholders, thereby enriching the substance of our foreign policy in the changed context.

Our continued contribution to global norms setting has earned us trust and confidence of the international community. Nepal’s articulation of its views on diverse issues confronting the world at large at forums like the UN General Assembly or the World Economic Forum has been well-recognized.

In short, Nepal’s foreign relations remained effective and instrumental in promoting overall national interest and enhancing the country’s international image.
I am pleased to present the Annual Report of the Ministry for the year 2018-19.

The year witnessed remarkable growth in Nepal's foreign relations. Building on the political stability, Nepal took concrete steps to diversify and strengthen relations with countries across the world. Nepal's bilateral engagements and its role in regional and multilateral forums significantly increased.

We continued to accord topmost priority to our relations with immediate neighbours - India and China - and have achieved notable progress. With India, Cross-border Motihari-Amlekhgunj Petroleum Pipeline Project was inaugurated while with China, Protocol to Transit Transport Agreement was signed. Various bilateral mechanisms with both the neighbours remained active in promoting bilateral cooperation.

We had fruitful engagements with our extended neighborhood, development partners and labour destination countries. The relations with them were further advanced through exchange of high-level visits and regular meetings of various mechanisms.

We successfully hosted the Fourth BIMSTEC Summit in Kathmandu on 30-31 August 2018. Similarly, our efforts continued towards realizing the SAARC objectives including holding the stalled SAARC Summit. Nepal chaired an informal session of the SAARC Council of Ministers on the sideline of the 73rd UNGA. We actively participated in the 16th Ministerial Meeting of Asia Cooperation Dialogue held in Doha.
We maintained firm commitment to multilateralism in line with the principles and purposes of the UN Charter. Nepal participated in major UN and other multilateral forums at the level of President in COP24 in Katowice, Vice President in Climate Action Summit in Vienna, Prime Minister in the 73rd UNGA in New York, and Foreign Minister in the 40th Session of the Human Rights Council in Geneva. We remained proactive in promoting interests of the LDCs and LLDCs.

The Ministry internalized the national aspiration of Prosperous Nepal, Happy Nepali in annual action plan to realize it through effective diplomacy. We prepared Country-Specific Strategies for economic diplomacy. Nepali missions abroad remained active in promoting Nepal’s export trade, attracting foreign investment and publicizing Nepal as a preferred tourist destination, particularly in the context of Visit Nepal Year, 2020.

The Ministry took initiatives for making a clear, consistent and credible foreign policy. National Dialogue on Foreign Policy was held; the Directives for the Appointment of Nepali Ambassadors and the Directives on the Procedures for Contacting Foreign Governments, Missions, Representatives and International Organizations by Provincial and Local Governments were introduced.

Initiatives have been taken to improve records and archives system. The Ministry also mobilized diplomatic missions to acquire property, especially land and buildings, for chancery and residential purposes. We also dedicated our efforts towards enhancing capacity of the Foreign Service cadres by organizing specialized negotiations and language related training courses.

The Ministry, Departments and Missions continued maintaining quality service delivery in a timely manner.

In a nutshell, Nepal’s foreign policy and diplomacy remained effective to strengthen the country’s relations with outside world and to promote the national interest.

I would like to thank the editorial team for bringing out this Annual Report. I believe, this report will be a good reflection, reference and record of major works of the Ministry.

Overview

This Annual Report, which is the fourth in its series since its publication was resumed in 2015, covers major activities carried out and their outcomes on the foreign policy front in the past one year. Nepal’s foreign relations remained effective, productive and result-oriented during the period under review. The country's external relations saw a robust growth in multiple sectors. Important initiatives were taken and notable achievements made.

Protection and promotion of national interest remained at the core of the conduct of our foreign relations. Nepal’s relations with the outside world were based on the principles of sovereign equality, independence, mutual respect and benefit. The UN Charter, non-alignment, the Panchasheel, international law, and norms of world peace remained the basis of our foreign policy. The country pursued an independent and balanced foreign policy and conducted its external dealings guided by fairness, merit and justice.

Socio-economic transformation was placed at the centre of our engagements at bilateral, regional and multilateral arena in line with the national aspiration of Prosperous Nepal, Happy Nepali. A host of programmes and activities were carried out for promotion of Nepal’s image as a nature’s paradise, a melting pot of civilizations, a nation with rich culture, an attractive destination for foreign investment, an entrepôt between two big economies with over two and a half billion population, and an inclusive society underpinned by equality and justice. The very premise of amity with all and enmity with none served well to fulfill our foreign policy objectives.

The neighborhood received top priority in our external relations. We made substantial efforts to enhance our relations with the immediate neighbours, India and China.

President Bidya Devi Bhandari paid a State visit to China and held delegation level talks with Chinese President Xi Jinping. The visit contributed to further strengthen Nepal-China friendship and cooperation. Likewise, Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli paid an official visit to India on the occasion of the swearing-in-ceremony of Prime Minister Narendra Modi and held bilateral talks which contributed to deepen the age-old friendly ties.

Our engagements with the countries in the extended neighborhood continued to grow, both at bilateral and regional levels. Regional cooperation frameworks, such as SAARC, BIMSTEC, SCO and ACD provided opportunities to foster partnership and collaboration.

Nepal’s relations further grew with development partners and major powers, labour receiving countries and other friendly countries, including LLDCs and LDCs. Nepal's role in the multilateral platforms also got accentuated in many key areas, such as international peace and security, disarmament, human rights, SDGs, climate change and migration.

Nepal’s relations with the major powers witnessed further growth and expansion. The visit of Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli to the United Kingdom in June 2019, soon after the bi-centennial celebrations, helped further consolidate our historical ties. Likewise, the Prime Minister’s visit to France on the occasion of the 70th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations contributed to strengthen Nepal-France relations.

On the regional front, Nepal successfully hosted the fourth BIMSTEC Summit in Kathmandu on 30-31 August 2018. Convened under the theme Towards a Peaceful, Prosperous and Sustainable Bay of Bengal Region the Summit agreed to strengthen cooperation in the priority areas, including energy, connectivity, trade, agriculture and institutional capacity building.

At the multilateral level, Prime Minister Oli represented Nepal in the 73rd Session of the UNGA and reaffirmed Nepal's profound commitment to multilateralism and rules-based international order. He shed light on Nepal’s historic political transformation, successful conclusion of the peace process and the priorities for socioeconomic transformation. Likewise, President Bidya Devi Bhandari’s participation in the COP24 reinforced Nepal’s highest level of political commitment to climate change agenda and implementation of the Paris Climate Accord. The international community recognized Nepal’s sterling performance in the field of gender equality and women empowerment when President Bidya Devi Bhandari was invited to share Nepal’s experiences in the high-level event on ‘Women in Power’ convened by the President of the General Assembly in New York in March 2019.

We effectively utilized our membership of the UN Human Rights Council in articulating our commitment to human rights and fundamental freedoms, highlighting our efforts and achievements and defending our core values, including right to life, among others. Foreign Minister Pradeep Kumar Gyawali represented Nepal in the 40th Session of the Council.

The ILO celebrated its hundred years of its founding. Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli was invited to address the Centenary Celebration of ILO in recognition of Nepal’s landmark initiatives to ensure social justice, workers’ rights and social security.

In the midst of growing uncertainties in multilateral trading system, Nepal continued to advocate for a fair, just and rule-based trading arrangements as represented by WTO.

A Glimpse of Major Activities and Outcomes

Neighborhood

Nepal-India relations continued to grow and expand. Exchange of high-level visits helped foster goodwill, understanding and trust between two countries and widened areas of cooperation.

India continued to be Nepal’s largest trading partner, the second largest investor, the largest source of tourists, and a major development partner. Economic partnership and connectivity featured prominently in our engagement with India.

Both countries agreed to implement the agreements and understanding reached in the past, including the new areas of cooperation.

Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli held a bilateral meeting with Prime Minister Narendra Modi in May 2019 during his visit to India to attend the swearing-in-ceremony of the latter.

Foreign Minister Pradeep Kumar Gyawali’s participation in the 4th edition of Raisina Dialogue on 11 January 2019, Former Prime Minister Pushpa Kamal Dahal Prachanda’s address at the 31st Sapru House Lecture on 7 September 2018 and Foreign Secretary Shanker Das Bairagi’s meeting with his Indian counterpart Vijaya Gokhale on 28 March 2019 were some of the major activities undertaken to promote bilateral relations.

Notable progress was made in the execution of some of the major bilateral projects, such as Amalekhgunj-Motihari petroleum pipeline, the first cross-border pipeline in South Asia, and Integrated Check-Post at Birgunj.
Foreign Secretary Shanker Das Bairagi held five rounds of video-conferences with his Indian counterpart. The sixth and seventh rounds of Nepal-India Oversight mechanism were held in Kathmandu led by the Foreign Secretary and Ambassador of India Manjeev Singh Puri. These meetings were held to expedite the implementation of India-aided projects.

Likewise, over a dozen meetings of bilateral mechanisms between Nepal and India were held, covering the areas of boundary, agriculture, cross-border railways, inland waterways connectivity, trade, customs, water resources, civil aviation, and security, among others.

China remained a major development partner, the largest source of foreign investment, and the second largest source of tourists and a major trading partner. Cooperation in building cross-border connectivity remained our topmost priority in our engagement with China.

Nepal-China relations witnessed continued momentum of friendly exchanges and cooperation during the given year. Exchange of high-level visits, meetings, consultations and increasing people-to-people relations helped expand the bilateral relations.

President Bidya Devi Bhandari’s State Visit to China in April 2019, her participation in the Second Belt and Road Forum for International Cooperation followed by the delegation level talks with Chinese President Xi Jinping remained historic. The signing of the Protocol to the Transit Transport Agreement opened up Nepal’s access to the three inland ports and four sea ports of China.

Vice President Nanda Bahadur Pun, Deputy Prime Minister Ishwar Pokhrel, Foreign Minister Pradeep Kumar Gyawali, other ministers and senior government officials visited China on various occasions.

From the Chinese side, Minister of Culture Luo Shugang visited Nepal to attend the 8th China Festival in Kathmandu. Similarly, Governor of Gansu Province of China Tang Renjian, Vice Governor and Director General of the Public Security Department of Sichuan Province of China Ye Hanbing and other high ranking officials visited Nepal.

Meetings of various bilateral mechanisms between Nepal and China were held. They included the meetings of Bilateral Consultation Mechanism, Railways cooperation, Border security Cooperation, Nepal-China’s Tibet Trade Facilitation Committee, and the first meeting of the newly established Mechanism for the Implementation of Nepal-China Cooperation Programs and Projects.

South Asia

Nepal’s engagement with its South Asian neighbours remained cordial and friendly. Afghan High Peace Council’s Deputy Chairman Dr. Habiba Sarabi visited Nepal in September 2018 to learn from Nepal’s home-grown peace process. During the visit, she met with the Vice President, Home Minister, Foreign Minister and Energy Minister.

Nepal-Bangladesh relations saw steady progress. Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli and Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina held bilateral talks on the sidelines of the 4th BIMSTEC Summit. The two countries signed an MOU in the field of Power Sector in August 2018.

This year witnessed the first ever visit to Nepal by Bhutan’s Queen Mother Ashi Dorji Wangmo Wangchuck in January 2019.

The year marked the 60th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between Nepal and Pakistan. Foreign Minister Gyawali met with his Pakistani counterpart in New York in September on the sidelines of the 73rd UNGA.

The Official visit by President of Sri Lanka Maithripala Sirisena to Nepal on 1-2 September 2018 contributed to promote the bilateral relations. Over seventy thousand Sri Lankan nationals, including Buddhist pilgrims, visited Nepal in 2018, making Sri Lanka the 4th largest source country of tourists to Nepal.

North East Asia

Nepal-Japan relations advanced further this year. Japan remained one of the largest development partners supporting Nepal in various areas of development. It is also one of the principal contributors to the post-earthquake reconstruction works. Over ninety thousand Nepali nationals are living in Japan, further enriching people-to-people relations. Foreign Minister Pradeep Kumar Gyawali visited Japan in November 2018 and received his Japanese counterpart Taro Kono in Kathmandu on a return visit in January 2019. Foreign Secretary Shanker Das Bairagi and Japanese Ambassador to Nepal Masamichi Saigo signed an MOU on the establishment of bilateral consultations on 9 January 2019. Important bilateral instruments were signed in the areas of civil aviation and employment for Nepali citizens in Japan.

The relationship between Nepal and the Republic of Korea (ROK) further augmented during the given year. There are around 40,000 Nepali workers employed in ROK under EPS model.

Nepal and Mongolia held a meeting of the Bilateral Consultation Mechanism between the Foreign Ministries of the two countries in Kathmandu on 1 October 2018.

South East Asia and Pacific

South East Asia represents an emerging market, innovation hub and thriving tourism destination. It is also a destination of employment and education for Nepali youths. The Pacific region with Australia and New Zealand at the center has been an obvious choice of Nepali youths for education and work. Nepal’s engagement with the South East Asia and Pacific region got renewed momentum this year.

Nepal and Malaysia held rounds of meetings to make the employment of Nepali workers in Malaysia safe, orderly and regular. Over 350,000 Nepali workers are employed in various sectors in Malaysia. Malaysian Minister for Human Resources M. Kula Segaran visited Nepal in October 2018. An MOU on the Recruitment, Employment and Repatriation for Nepali workers was signed during the visit.

Nepal and Myanmar enjoyed close relationship based on historical and socio-cultural linkages. Over 200,000 people of Nepali origin live in Myanmar. President of the Union of Myanmar U Win Myint visited Nepal in August 2018. He also attended the 4th BIMSTEC Summit. During the visit, he held bilateral talks with President Bidya Devi Bhandari and Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli. He also visited Lumbini during his stay in Nepal.

Nepal and Thailand saw a renewed momentum in their bilateral relations. Thai Prime Minister General Prayut Chan-o-cha visited Nepal in August 2018 to attend the 4th BIMSTEC Summit. The Thai Prime Minister also held delegation level talks with Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli.

Nepal-Vietnam came closer bilaterally through expansion of their relationship. Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli’s visit to Vietnam in May 2019 remained remarkable. A number of agreements were signed during the visit. The two Prime Ministers had earlier met in Davos on the sidelines of the World Economic Forum.
Nepal-Cambodia relations were further consolidated. Prime Minister Oli visited Cambodia in May 2019 and held discussion with Prime Minister Hun Sen on various matters of mutual interest. Prime Minister Hun Sen visited Nepal in November-December 2018 and held bilateral talks with Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli.

Australia remained an important development partner of Nepal and a preferred destination for Nepali students. Nepal and Australia held the first meeting of the bilateral consultation mechanism in August 2018 in Kathmandu. The number of Nepali diaspora in Australia has grown significantly in recent years. The number of tourist from Australia is also growing steadily.

Central Asia, West Asia and Africa

Nepal’s relations with the countries of Central Asia, West Asia and Africa remained friendly and cordial. The countries of the Gulf region—Saudi Arabia, Qatar, the UAE, Kuwait, Bahrain and Oman—have been the important destination of overseas employment for over 1.1 million Nepali workers.

The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia remains an important friend of Nepal. Around 400,000 Nepali nationals were in employment in Saudi Arabia during the reporting period. The Saudi Government provided Rs. 3.33 billion from the Saudi Development Fund for Nepal's reconstruction. Nearly 1,500 Nepali Muslim hajjis visit Mecca every year.

Nepal-Qatar relations saw further growth marked by the high-level visit. President Bidya Devi Bhandari visited the State of Qatar in October 2018 and held bilateral talks with Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad Al Thani, Amir of the State of Qatar. Three important bilateral instruments were signed during the visit.

This year saw important development in bilateral relations between Nepal and the UAE. The two countries signed a MOU in the Recruitment, Employment and Repatriation of Workers on 14 June 2019 in Geneva.

Europe and Americas

Europe and Americas continued to remain important regions for Nepal in terms of bilateral partnership and multilateral cooperation. During the review period, President Bidya Devi Bhandari visited Poland, held bilateral meeting with her Polish counterpart and attended high-level session of COP24 in Katowice. Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli visited UK, Switzerland, France and Costa Rica. Foreign Minister Pradeep Kumar Gyawali visited Argentina, Austria, Belgium, Luxembourg, Portugal, the US, and the EU headquarters. The Foreign Minister of Austria visited Nepal. Likewise, Foreign Secretary Shanker Das Bairagi was engaged in dialogue with the partner countries of this region, both at home and abroad.

Regional Cooperation

Regional cooperation features in our foreign policy priority. In this spirit, Nepal continued to play an active role for the promotion of regional cooperation in South Asia under SAARC. We, as the current chair, made efforts to revive the stalled SAARC summit, including through convening of the informal meeting of the SAARC Council of Ministers. We also actively participated in the activities of ACD and remained associated with SCO as a dialogue partner.

Nepal successfully hosted the 4th BIMSTEC Summit in Kathmandu on 30-31 August 2018. This was the first time that Nepal welcomed the Heads of State and Governments from the BIMSTEC Member countries in its capital after becoming the Member of this regional grouping. The BIMSTEC leaders held friendly discussions towards achieving socio-economic development of the region and issued Kathmandu Declaration. With Nepal’s initiative, the proposal to frame a charter of the BIMSTEC was incorporated in the Declaration which aims at deepening and widening regional cooperation through rationalization of activities and building institutional capacity.

Multilateral Affairs

Nepal strongly believes in multilateralism with the United Nations at the centre. The UN Charter constitutes one of the fundamental pillars of our foreign policy. During the review period, Nepal actively engaged in promoting national interest through multilateral platforms while contributing to strengthening multilateral norms-setting process for the collective benefit of humanity. Implementing the 2030 agenda for sustainable development, fighting against the adverse impacts of climate change, advocating for more favourable international support measures, including technology transfer to developing countries and upholding the principles of peaceful coexistence, mutual respect, sovereign equality, non-interference, peaceful settlement of disputes and cooperation among nations. We continued contributing to the international peace and security through active participation in the UN peace operations, playing constructive and objective role at the UN Human Rights Council, contributing to the policy process of ILO, IOM, UNCTAD, UN Funds and Boards, Peace Building Commission, Commission on Science and Technology, and in the inter-governmental negotiation process on migration, biodiversity, among others.

Policy, Planning, Development Diplomacy and Nepali Diaspora

With a view to forging broad consensus among the key stakeholders on the fundamentals of Nepal’s foreign Policy, the Ministry organized a day-long National Dialogue on Foreign Policy in May 2019. Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli addressed the opening session of the Dialogue and shed light in the important achievements made on foreign policy front since the formation of the government under his leadership and called for greater understanding among the political parties on the basics of foreign policy. The Foreign Minister Pradeep Kumar Gyawali presented a policy paper for discussion. The Dialogue was well received by the general public.

In order to tap the intellectual resources of Nepali diaspora, a Brain Gain Center (BGC) was established at the Ministry.

In an effort to continue promoting Nepal in international arena, the Ministry organized a Conference of Nepal’s Honorary Consuls overseas in Kathmandu in June 2019.

The Ministry, in collaboration with UNITAR, organized a workshop in November 2018 on multilateral negotiations and conference diplomacy for enhancing capacity of its human resources.

Interaction of the Provincial and Local authorities with foreign governments and missions has been streamlined and managed with the adoption of the Directives.

The Government of Nepal established Sagarmatha Sambaad as a permanent dialogue forum to deliberate on issues of national, regional and global significance. A Steering Committee and an Organizing Committee were constituted to advance the preparatory work for hosting the first edition of the dialogue in 2020.

To make economic diplomacy result-oriented and provide diplomatic missions overseas with clear guidelines, country-specific strategies were finalized.

Protocol Matters

Altogether, twenty-seven high-level visits, twenty outgoing and seven incoming, took place under the review period. Nepal established diplomatic relations with six more countries, namely Rwanda, Madagascar, Suriname, Togo, Equatorial Guinea and Eswatini. With this expansion, Nepal’s diplomatic relations reached 166 countries.

Consular Services

The Department of Consular Services complied with its commitment of providing Service Delivery within half an hour on submission of the documents. It introduced online verification system in order to ensure and authenticate the documents attested. In addition, the Department launched Mobile App named Nepal Consular in February 2019 to make the consular legal services easy and accessible. It also improved the process of verifying the Power of Attorney issued from Nepali Missions abroad.

Passport Services

The Department of Passports, the first NS/ISO 9001:2015 certified government agency in Nepal, effectively delivered services. Working with the motto Transparent, Accountable and Citizen-Friendly Service, it personalized a total of 515,146 MRTDs, including 513,038 ordinary passports, 1,235 official passports, 741 diplomatic passports, and 132 Travel Documents.
Review of Nepal’s Foreign Relations

1. Neighbourhood

Nepal's neighbours, India and China, received global attention and focus in the review period, as both countries continued registering achievements in economic, technological, social, and other spheres.

In India, after Bharatiya Janata Party’s victory in Lok Sabha elections held in April and May 2019, Prime Minister Narendra Modi took office for the second term. The Government of India announced that it would continue the ‘Neighbourhood First’ policy.

Similarly, significant developments took place in the People’s Republic of China. It continued to be the leading exporter and the second largest economy of the world. China’s Belt and Road Initiative (BRI) attracted global attention.

Nepal attached high importance to its relations with both India and China. Sovereign equality, mutual trust and benefits were the hallmarks of our bilateral relations. Nepal's relations with both of its neighbours further expanded and deepened during the period under review.

Nepal maintained its policy of not allowing its territory to be used against its neighbours and expects the same from them. Understanding of each other's concerns and sensitivity was also one of the elements of Nepal’s policy towards neighbours.

Nepal engaged extensively with India and China in various areas of cooperation. As a result, bilateral relationship with both the neighbours remained productive and mutually beneficial. The exchange of high-level visits and meetings of bilateral mechanisms at various levels contributed to further enhancing the bilateral ties.

India

Nepal-India relations were marked by positive developments in several fronts. Enhanced engagements at the level of Prime Minister helped foster greater degree of mutual trust and confidence in the relationship.

The Lok Sabha elections were held in India in April-May 2019. Prime Minister Narendra Modi was re-elected to the office for the second term with strong majority in Lok Sabha.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi’s government reiterated Neighbourhood First policy. Neighbourhood is Nepal’s policy priority too. Based on policy consonance and strong leadership on both sides, bilateral partnership was further advanced.

In line with the understanding reached between the two Prime Ministers, all the bilateral mechanisms remained active during this period. As a result, significant progress took place in a number of areas, particularly cross border connectivity, infrastructure, energy, trade, transit, agriculture, and security, among others. The first ever cross border petroleum pipeline project between Amlekhgunj (Nepal) and Motihari (India) was inaugurated. The Integrated Check Post at Birgunj (Nepal)-Raxaul (India) was completed and brought into operation. The major portion of the Integrated Check Post at Biratnagar (Nepal)-Jogbani (India) was also completed.

Likewise, Janakpur-Jaynagar cross border railway project was completed; its further extension up to Bardibas is underway. Construction of Biratnagar-Jogbani cross border railway progressed well. Feasibility study of the flagship project of Raxaul-Kathmandu Railway was completed as agreed during the State Visit of the Prime Minister of Nepal to India last year. Necessary study and preparations were done on developing inland waterways connectivity.

Construction works of some segments of the Postal Roads were completed under the Government of India’s assistance. Progress was also registered in several projects under the Indian Exim Bank’s various Lines of Credit.

Both countries enhanced cooperation in power sector. Arun III hydropower project undertaken by India’s public enterprise Satlaj Jal Vidyut Nigam (SJVN) witnessed satisfactory progress. Bilateral negotiations were held on energy banking and development of cross-border transmission lines and power trade between the two countries.

The Eminent Persons’ Group (EPG) on Nepal-India relations accomplished its work and is waiting for submitting its consensus report.

The Ministerial meeting decided to establish Corpus Fund under BIMSTEC Development Fund. The meeting was concluded with the Joint Statement Farming for Prosperity through Sustainable Agriculture, Building Resilience for Food Security and Nutrition.

The Second Meeting of the BIMSTEC Task Force on Traditional Medicine was held in Nay Pyi Taw, Myanmar on 24-25 January 2019. The meeting discussed recent developments in the sector of Ayurveda and recommended for the establishment of a BIMSTEC Ayurveda and Traditional Medicine University.

Asia Cooperation Dialogue (ACD)

Since its association with the Asia Cooperation Dialogue (ACD) in 2016, Nepal has strengthened its engagement with this regional forum. Foreign Minister Pradeep Kumar Gyawali participated in the ACD Foreign Ministers’ Meeting held on the sidelines of the 73rd Session of the UN General Assembly in New York on 27 September 2018.

Environment Minister Shakti Bahadur Basnet attended the 16th ACD Ministerial Meeting convened under the theme Partners in Progress in Doha on 1 May 2019. The meeting adopted Doha Declaration which emphasizes the programs and initiatives to expand regional trade, transit, investment and infrastructure development; strengthen cooperation to prevent cyber security, organized crime and human trafficking; and enhance the promotion and protection of human rights. The ACD Ministerial Meeting was preceded by the Senior Official’s Meeting (SOM) to which Joint Secretary of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs Yagya Bahadur Hamal led the Nepali delegation. The SOM finalized the Draft Doha Declaration.

Nepal is currently the co-prime mover of culture and tourism sector under ACD.
8. Multilateral Affairs

The year 2018-19 marked the 100 years of multilateralism to promote cooperation among nations for peace, security and development. Yet the challenges to peace and security continue as the world grows more complex. We continued to witness shifting commitments to multilateral institutions and processes created for the post second world war order. The uncertainties prevailed among all international actors- states, multilateral organizations, civil society, and transnational entities alike.

The rise of populist nationalism and protectionist policies are indicative of the world being in the cusp of change. The change has been accelerated by the disruptive technologies. Increased connectivity has not been able to narrow down the division and polarization of global narratives and promote convergence. We are yet to define agreed global norms in critical areas, such as use of cyber space, artificial intelligence and outer space. There exists international regulatory vacuum on accountability and responsibility of trans-boundary impact of climate change, pollution, nuclear accidents and disasters, and use of drones and unmanned aerial vehicles. It is not yet clear how the global community will respond to the shifting nuances of international order and adjust the existing cooperative arrangements.

The WTO continued to remain constrained by trade-restrictive measures and resulting trade tensions between member states. The inability to appoint the members of the WTO Appellate body left the dispute settlement mechanism defunct. It is likely that the slowdown in global trade will lead to global economic downturn. It will have deep impact on global initiative to achieve 2030 agenda for sustainable development, particularly for the LDCs.

US withdrawal from the Human Rights Council apparently left space for other countries of Europe, Latin America and Asia to shape the international human rights agenda. Celebration of ILO Centenary reinforced the importance of inclusive and human-centred world of work with social justice.

The issue of refugee and migration figured prominently on the Global agenda. The adoption of the Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration (GCM) by consensus of over 164 UN member States in Marrakesh in December 2018 remained one of the remarkable achievements in the field of migration this year. The humanitarian needs prompted by conflict, violence and natural disasters persisted. Against this backdrop, the adoption of Global Compact on Refugees (GCR) this year created a framework for addressing the problem of the people on the move.

The agenda of climate change received sustained and considerable attention. UN Secretary General’s visit to Pacific Island States and the release of Special Report of IPCC on Global Warming in October 2018 raised significant alarm on the real impact of climate change. The report highlights that even the rise of temperature by 1.5 degree Celsius would have existential consequences. UNSG’s persistent diplomacy enabled the COP24 held in Katowice, Poland to agree on the ‘rule book’ for the implementation of the Paris Agreement.

The rapprochement between the United States and North Korea generated new hopes. The signing of a joint declaration, outlining steps toward reducing tensions, expanding inter-Korean exchanges of visits and cooperation, and achieving denuclearization, was a welcome development.

Disarmament agenda could not gather momentum even after the UN Secretary General’s Agenda for Disarmament announced in May 2018. Both the Disarmament Commission and the Conference on Disarmament were unable to make any headway on their work and agenda during the year.

Nepal’s commitment to the principles enshrined in the UN Charter and multilateralism were demonstrated by representation at the highest levels in major UN and multilateral events. President Bidya Devi Bhandari led Nepali delegations to the COP24 held in Poland and High Level Event on Women in Power during the annual session of the Commission on the Status of Women. Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli led Nepali delegation to the 73rd Session of the UNGA in New York. Vice President Nanda Bahadur Pun represented Nepal at the World Summit on Climate Change held in Austria. Foreign Minister Pradeep Kumar Gyawali led Nepali delegations to the 62nd session of General Conference of IAEA, 40th Session of the Human Rights Council and BAPA+40 Conference on South-South Cooperation.

Nepal pursued its national interests through multilateral platforms by pursuing the agenda of implementing SDGs, fighting the impact of climate change, advocating for the technology transfer, and advancing the principles of peaceful coexistence, mutual respect, sovereign equality, non-interference, fairness and justice in international relations. Nepal continued contributing to the UN peace operations as the 5th largest troop and police contributing country, playing constructive and objective role at the UN Human Rights Council, contributing to the policy process of Committees of UNGA, ILO, IOM, UN Funds and Boards, Peace Building Commission, Commission on Science and Technology, and in the inter-governmental negotiation process on migration, biodiversity beyond national jurisdiction, among others.

Nepal in the United Nations

Nepal considers United Nations (UN) as the most legitimate and representative multilateral body to serve global interest and address the issues of global commons. Nepal continued to play a constructive role in the policy making process of all three pillars of the UN system: peace and security, development, and human rights. Nepal’s election to various UN bodies, boards of UN Funds and Programmes as well as treaty bodies has provided opportunities to contribute to the work of those agencies and help enhance country's image. Nepal's participation in the UN General Assembly sessions, Peace Operations, Human Rights Council and other entities of the UN is a demonstration of our firm commitment to the multilateral process. Nepal consistently voiced for preventive diplomacy and peaceful settlement of disputes. As a member of the Human Rights Council (HRC), Nepal advocated for impartial, objective and non-selective approach to human rights issues. We remained active in inter-governmental negotiations for making the work of the General Assembly more focused, efficient and relevant; reform of the Security Council; and strengthening of the Economic and Social Council.

Nepal in the 73rd UNGA

Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli addressed the 73rd Session of the UN General Assembly (UNGA) in New York on 27 September 2018. He highlighted the historic political transformation of Nepal, promulgation of the democratic and progressive constitution, successful holding of three-tier elections and the formation of a stable government thereafter.
He added that Nepal has embraced a vision of comprehensive democracy that empowers people politically, socially, culturally and economically.

The Prime Minister reaffirmed Nepal’s commitment to multilateralism and highlighted the importance of UN’s role in solving global problems like poverty, unemployment, terrorism, climate change, food insecurity, natural disasters, conflicts and arms race. He called on the international community to support with means of implementation to achieving the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, tackle climate change, provide quality education to children, and address the technology gap. He also called on the international community to take the cross-pillar restructuring of the UN to its conclusion and take up the issue of general and complete disarmament of all weapons of mass destruction.

The Prime Minister, speaking in the High-Level Meeting on Action for Peacekeeping (A4P) on 26 September 2018, paid tribute to the brave peacekeepers, including seventy-three Nepali nationals who made ultimate sacrifice in the line of duty. He reaffirmed Nepal’s commitment to international peace and security through UN peacekeeping.

Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli met with the US President Donald Trump during the reception hosted by the President and held a brief talk with him on Nepal-US relations.

The Prime Minister held a bilateral meeting with United Nations Secretary-General António Guterres on 27 September 2018 and discussed about the important political gains Nepal achieved recently and the way forward for institutionalizing them. The Secretary-General commended Nepal’s democratic transitions as an important example.

Gyawali addressed the Ministerial Meeting of Non-Aligned Movement (NAM) on 26 September 2018. Speaking on the theme Upholding the UN Charter and the Purposes and Principles of the Non-Aligned Movement (NAM): Towards a Culture of Peace, Minister Gyawali said, “as the torch bearer of rules-based, inclusive and multilateral world order, the onus lies on the Movement to uphold the UN Charter as well as the principles of NAM, both of which are the embodiment of culture of peace.”

The Foreign Minister also attended the annual Ministerial Meeting of the G77 and delivered a statement at the High-level Ministerial Meeting of the Group of Friends of Mediation in which he underlined Nepal’s distinct experience of managing conflict. He also expressed Nepal’s readiness to share its national experience, best practice and lesson learned in the larger interest of humanity.

The Foreign Minister also addressed the Annual Ministerial Meeting of the LDCs on 26 September 2018 and of LLDCs on 28 September 2018. He outlined Nepal’s efforts towards the implementation of SDGs and called for robust international partnership to achieve the goals.

On the sidelines of the 73rd UNGA, Foreign Minister Pradeep Kumar Gyawali addressed the Ministerial Meeting of Non-Aligned Movement (NAM) on 26 September 2018. Speaking on the theme Upholding the UN Charter and the Purposes and Principles of the Non-Aligned Movement (NAM): Towards a Culture of Peace, Minister Gyawali said, “as the torch bearer of rules-based, inclusive and multilateral world order, the onus lies on the Movement to uphold the UN Charter as well as the principles of NAM, both of which are the embodiment of culture of peace.”

The Foreign Minister also attended the annual Ministerial Meeting of the G77 and delivered a statement at the High-level Ministerial Meeting of the Group of Friends of Mediation in which he underlined Nepal’s distinct experience of managing conflict. He also expressed Nepal’s readiness to share its national experience, best practice and lesson learned in the larger interest of humanity.

The Foreign Minister also addressed the Annual Ministerial Meeting of the LDCs on 26 September 2018 and of LLDCs on 28 September 2018. He outlined Nepal’s efforts towards the implementation of SDGs and called for robust international partnership to achieve the goals.
The Foreign Minister also addressed the Nelson Mandela Peace Summit on 01 October 2018 and stressed the importance of global peace.

While in New York, the Foreign Minister also held separate bilateral meetings with the UN Deputy Secretary-General Amina J. Mohammed and Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations Jean-Pierre Lacroix.

International Peace and Security

Nepal continued its contribution to the maintenance of international peace and security through contributing troops to the UN Peace Operations. Nepal currently stands as the fifth largest troop-contributing country (TCC) with more than 5,600 peacekeepers in the field.

Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli, while addressing the High-level Meeting on Action for Peacekeeping (A4P) in New York on 25 September 2018, reaffirmed Nepal's abiding faith in the UN Charter and firm commitment to international peace and security. Nepal supported the Secretary-General's peace, security and management reform agenda and his priority to peace diplomacy.

Deputy Prime Minister and Defence Minister Ishwar Pokharel participated in the annual UN Peacekeeping Ministerial Conference in New York in March 2019. He reiterated Nepal's support to the reform of peace operations and pledged readiness to provide an Infantry Battalion, a Force Protection Company, two Formed Police Units, individual police officers, and staff and military observers in the Peacekeeping Capability Readiness System for the year 2019-20. He also pledged a special force company at the Rapid Deployment Level of the PCRS. DPM Pokharel stressed the need for a renewed focus on capacity building efforts for the improvement of peacekeepers’ performance.

Disarmament and New Security Issues

Nepal has consistently advocated for general and complete disarmament of all weapons of mass destruction, including chemical, biological, nuclear and radiological weapons. Threat to international peace and security emanates from both traditional and non-traditional sources. On the one hand, menaces like gun violence, terrorism, modernization of the nuclear arsenals and intra-state conflicts continue to imperil human security and, on the other hand, a host of non-traditional challenges including climate change, scarcity of freshwater, food insecurity and natural disasters pose new threats to human security. As the National Authority on Disarmament Affairs, the Ministry closely follows the international development, negotiation and initiatives to cut the stockpiles of weapons of mass destruction and effective regulation of small arms and light weapons.

Sustainable Development Goals

Nepal remains committed to the achievement of Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and has taken initiatives to achieve them through national policies, plans and programs. National Planning Commission Vice-Chairman Dr. Puspa Raj Kadel participated in the annual event of ECOSOC’s High-Level Political Forum on SDGs in New York on 9-18 July 2019. He highlighted the current status of the achievement and Nepal’s future plans to accelerate the pace of implementation of the 2030 Agenda. He also shared Nepal’s perspectives on impacts of climate change on mountains, education for all, inclusion, Nepal’s peace process and financing for SDGs.

UN Reform

Nepal is a strong advocate of the UN reform. In view of changing geopolitical dynamics, expansion of the UN membership and the value given to the new norms for participation, representation and inclusion, the reform of the UN is a necessity. Nepal welcomed the repositioning of UN Development System in anticipation of enhanced performance, results, accountability, transparency and national ownership of the UN development programs.

Migration

Nepal played active role in the negotiation of the Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration (GCM) which was adopted by the intergovernmental conference held in Marrakech, Morocco on 10-11 December 2018. Labour Minister Gokarna Raj Bista addressed the conference and stressed the need for regular pathways and decent jobs for migrant workers.

Human Rights

Nepal upholds the ideals of inclusive democracy and integrated approach to human rights and development. Nepal believes in the universality of human rights and holds that all human rights are universal, indivisible, interdependent, inter-related and mutually-reinforcing, which merit balanced treatment and equal emphasis. The year 2018 remained as the year of human rights law making in Nepal. In line with the Constitutional provision, we enacted sixteen legislations relating to the fundamental rights.

Foreign Minister Pradeep Kumar Gyawali addressed the 40th Session of Human Rights Council in Geneva on 27 February 2019. He stressed that peace and human rights cannot be achieved without attaining inclusive development.

The Foreign Minister also participated as a panelist at the high-level panel on question of death penalty and shared Nepal's view that the right to life is sacred and inviolable that makes a basis for all human rights. He affirmed Nepal’s conscious choice to go for complete abolition of death penalty.

Nepal's 6th periodic report was considered by the CEDAW Committee on 23-24 October 2018. The Special Rapporteur on Violence against Women, its Causes and Consequences Dubravka Šimonovic visited Nepal from 18 to 29 November 2018. She presented her report to the 41st session of the Human Rights Council. Nepal officially assumed the role of coordinator of the 56-countries’ Asia Pacific Group at the Human Rights Council from 1 January 2019.

South-South Cooperation

Nepal believes that the South-South, North-South and triangular cooperation help promote development in the countries of global South. Foreign Minister Pradeep Kumar Gyawali addressed the Second High-level UN Conference on South-South Cooperation held in Buenos Aires on 20-22 March 2019 and underscored the growing relevance of South-South Cooperation to the countries of global South. The Foreign Minister also highlighted that South-South Cooperation is complementary to the North-South Cooperation, not its substitute. He underlined that South-South Cooperation can positively contribute to the timely implementation of the 2030 Agenda and other internationally agreed development outcomes, including Istanbul Programme of Action for LDCs, and Vienna Programme of Action for LLDCs.

Ocean and the Law of the Sea

Nepal participated in the Second Session of the Intergovernmental Conference on an international legally binding agreement on the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity of areas Beyond National Jurisdiction (BBNJ) held in New York from 25 March to 5 April 2019. Nepal emphasized on fair and equitable access to and sharing of the benefit of marine genetic resources to the LLDCs. Nepal also highlighted the importance of capacity building and the transfer of marine technologies.

UN Specialized Agencies

Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli addressed the ILO Centenary Conference held in Geneva on 10 June 2019. In his address, the Prime Minister underlined Nepal’s effort to carry forward the decent work agenda, comprehensive scheme of social security and promotion of decent job. He called the preambular pledges of the ILO’s Constitution the ‘moral minimum’ and urged international community to demonstrate renewed commitment to meet and rise above the minimum labour standards. While visualizing Nepal’s agenda for decent work under the theme of Skilled workers, prosperous Nepal and happy Nepali he elaborated that democracy without economic rights and social justice remains incomplete.
The Prime Minister also attended the Hand-Over ceremony of the ILO flag hoisted at the Summit of the Mount Everest. Joint Trade Union Coordination Committee President Vinod Shrestha handed over the flag to the Director General Guy Ryder. Currently, Nepal is Deputy Member of the ILO Governing Body representing both the Government as well as Workers.

At the second Trade Policy Review of Nepal at the WTO Headquarters in Geneva on 3-5 December 2018, Nepal shared progress on reforms in trade-governance, policy regimes, investment climate, foreign trade, and role of the private sector in Nepal’s economy and trade. Delegates of 22 WTO members took the floor and appreciated Nepal’s commitment to multilateral trading system as well as reform initiatives undertaken. As a member State, Nepal closely followed the process at General Council and Trade Negotiation Committee (TNC) as well as thematic Committees/Councils of the WTO during the review period. Nepal was elected to the Chair of Enhanced Integrated Framework (EIF) for the term 2019-2021.

Nepal’s partnership with International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) continued to grow during the year in review. Foreign Minister Pradeep Kumar Gyawali participated in the 62nd Annual Regular Session of the General Conference of IAEA held in Vienna on 17-21 September 2018. Addressing the conference, the Minister called for general and complete disarmament of all weapons of mass destruction. He also emphasized on the need to utilize nuclear science and technology only for the peaceful purposes within recognized safeguard framework of IAEA.

Education Minister Giriraj Mani Pokharel addressed the IAEA Ministerial Conference on Nuclear Science and Technology held in Vienna on 28-30 November 2018. He stressed the need for enhanced international cooperation to help Nepal bridge the gap in the field of nuclear science and technology, health, agriculture, including response to natural disasters.

Nepal was elected as a Member of Commission on Narcotic Drugs (CND) for the term 2020-23. Home Minister Ram Bahadur Thapa participated in the 62nd Session of CND held in Vienna on 14-15 March 2019. He highlighted the growing challenges relating to the use of narcotic drugs and urged the international community to provide technical cooperation to the LDCs to tackle drug issues.

Nepal participated in the Ninth Session of the Conference of the States Parties of the UN Convention against Corruption held in Vienna on 15-19 October 2018 and highlighted the need to forge deeper cooperation in the joint fight against transnational organized crime in all its forms and manifestations. Nepal also shared its policy and institutional measures in controlling corruption.

Prime Minister receives honorary-doctorate degree at the UN University for Peace

Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli addressed a special programme organized by the University for Peace in San Jose, Costa Rica on 1 October 2018. On the occasion, the Prime Minister was awarded with the honorary-doctorate degree (doctor honoris causa) by the University in recognition of his contribution to achieving peace and democracy in Nepal. He delivered a speech of acceptance, highlighting the inter-relationship between peace, democracy, human rights and development at the award ceremony.

Initiated with five-fold objectives of recognizing, promoting, connecting, mobilizing and rewarding the Diaspora experts, the center has attracted over 600 Nepali expats from across the globe.

Country-Specific Strategies for Economic Diplomacy

The Ministry prepared country specific strategies of economic diplomacy. The strategy identifies priorities for economic diplomacy related activities, such as trade, investment, tourism, overseas employment and official development assistance.

Brain Gain Center (BGC)

The Ministry established a Brain Gain Center (BGC) with an objective of identifying, recognizing and encouraging Nepali experts and professionals around the world and creating an enabling environment for them to contribute to Nepal’s socio-economic development.
2. Protocol Matters

The Ministry facilitated a number of high level visits, both outgoing and incoming. It also arranged programmes for presentation of Letters of Credence to the President by ambassadors of various countries to Nepal.

During the period under review, the Ministry conducted twenty-seven high-level visits which included twenty outgoing and seven incoming visits. Details of the incoming and outgoing visits are annexed.

The Government of Nepal granted nineteen agrément to Ambassadors-Designate to Nepal during the reporting period. Similarly, twenty-five foreign Ambassadors-Designate presented their Letters of Credence to the President of Nepal.

Nepal hosts 28 diplomatic missions in Kathmandu, including the SAARC Secretariat and Delegation of the European Union.
3. Consular Services

The Department of Consular Services effectively delivered services to the general public, Government officials and the Diplomatic Missions and International Organizations stationed in Nepal.

The Department continued to fulfill its commitment to service delivery within half an hour. It has introduced an online system for making requests for visa recommendation, consular-legal services and diplomatic exemptions, and also put in place the online verification system for power of attorney attested by the Department as well as Nepali missions abroad. The online verification system has enabled to check the authenticity of the documents attested and visa notes issued.

The Department coordinated with the Nepali Missions abroad in the works relating to search and rescue, compensation, and repatriation of dead bodies of the Nepali nationals overseas. It launched Mobile App Nepal Consular on 20 February 2019 to enhance accessibility of the people to the consular-legal services.

The table below shows major consular services provided by the Department this year:

4. Passport Services

The Department of Passports delivered services in an efficient manner. It is the first government agency to have been certified with NS/ISO 9001:2015. The Department personalized a total of 515,146 Machine Readable Travel Documents (MRTDs) including 513,038 ordinary, 1,235 official, 741 diplomatic passports and 132 Travel Documents this year. So far, the Department has issued a total of 5,973,311 MRTDs.

The Department continued to improve the quality of its service to the Nepali citizens. With a view to addressing the need and preference of the public, the Department made arrangements for issuance of passports through fast track and normal track. There are twelve live-enrollment counters at the Department, and ten in the Nepali Missions abroad located in Doha, Riyadh, Jeddah, Abu Dhabi, Kuwait, Kuala Lumpur, Hong Kong, London, Washington DC and New York.

The Department continued working closely with relevant stakeholders to make the verification process of passport secure, simple, reliable and client-friendly. Online access to the citizenship database of the Home Ministry and hotline access to all District Administration Offices were effectively used to verify the authenticity of the documents issued, including citizenship certificate. The Department has effectively maintained the digital database of nearly six million personalized passports.

The Department also undertook various reform measures in quality control and internal control in order to better provide standardized, efficient and predictable services. Quality manual was followed to maintain service standardization and internal as well as external audit of the services as required by ISO certifying authority.

The Department developed and implemented a comprehensive software of passport management information system (PMIS). It covers almost all the end-to-end processes from submission of application to personalization, dispatch and delivery of personalized passports.

The Department signed an MOU with Buddha Air Pvt. Ltd. for transportation of collected passport application forms and timely distribution of printed Machine Readable Travel Documents (MRTDs) through 10 airports including Biratnagar, Bhadrapur, Simara, Janakpur, Bharatpur, Pokhara, Surkhet, Bhairahawa, Dhangadhi and Nepalgunj. With this arrangement, the Department is directly connected to 58 Districts.

The Department made necessary arrangements within its premises for personalization of passports of people with disability, senior citizens, women and those requiring special attention. It effectively handled grievances of service seekers through 'grievance handling unit'.

The Department published a Handbook on Passport Issuance and Its Use, 2019 to provide information about passport services and to address the frequently asked questions (FAQ) relating to passport.

The Department conducted 14 orientations and training and interaction programs for the staff of District/Area Administration Offices in all Provincial Capitals and some District Headquarters.
5. Administration and Management

The Ministry carried forward the drive for institutional capacity building. The procurement of properties for the Ministry, Departments, and Missions abroad received due attention. The Ministry implemented the new Directives on Placement and Posting of Foreign Service and other officials in Nepali Missions Abroad, 2069. Foreign Service officials were adjusted as per the provisions of the Civil Servants Adjustment Ordinance. The newly appointed staff of the Ministry were imparted training of Arabic, Chinese and French languages.

A seven-member parliamentary delegation led by the House of Representatives’ Public Accounts Committee Chairman Bharat Kumar Shah visited the Embassies of Nepal in Riyadh, Paris, Berlin and London for a Parliamentary oversight.

The Ministry, Departments, Liaison Office, and diplomatic missions abroad addressed public grievances received directly as well as through Hello Sarkar.

A report on "Inspection of the Inventories" of the Ministry for the Fiscal Year 2017-18 was prepared. A proposal was submitted to the Council of Ministers on 2 December 2018 regarding the management (auction and disposal) of old and damaged furniture, machineries and vehicles of Nepali diplomatic missions abroad.

The Ministry initiated the renovation of its own building. The construction works of new building for Department of Consular Services and Department of Passports are at final phase in Tripureswor, Kathmandu. The Ministry also placed high priority to purchase or construct buildings for Chancery and Residence of Nepali Missions abroad. Nepali Embassy in Washington DC purchased a new building for the Ambassador’s Residence.

Embassies of Nepal in Beijing, Canberra, Colombo, Dhaka, Islamabad, Muscat, New Delhi and Riyadh were instructed to purchase land and build Chancery or Residence for Ambassadors and other diplomats. The Ministry also directed the Embassy of Nepal in Tokyo and the Permanent Missions of Nepal in Geneva and New York to initiate the process for purchasing appropriate apartment or building for Chancery or Ambassador's Residence.

The Government of Nepal appointed ambassadors to fourteen countries this year. Five ambassadors were recalled and the resignation of two ambassadors approved. Following is the details of the Ambassadors’ appointment, recall and resignation:

II. Joint Statements

JOINT STATEMENT BETWEEN THE SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF VIETNAM AND THE FEDERAL DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF NEPAL ON THE OFFICIAL VISIT TO VIETNAM BY H.E. K P SHARMA OLII, PRIME MINISTER OF NEPAL

Ha Noi, 11 May 2019

1. H.E. K P Sharma Oli, Prime Minister of Nepal, paid an official visit to Viet Nam from 9 – 13 May, 2019 at the invitation of H.E. Nguyen Xuan Phuc, Prime Minister of Viet Nam. Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli was accompanied by his spouse Mrs. Radhika Shakya, Minister for Foreign Affairs Hon. Pradeep Kumar Gyawali, Advisors to the Prime Minister, Members of Parliament and high ranking government officials. A business delegation also accompanied the Prime Minister of Nepal.

2. The official welcoming ceremony was solemnly held at the Presidential Palace on 11 May 2019. After the welcoming ceremony, Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli held talks with Prime Minister Nguyen Xuan Phuc, met with President of the National Assembly Nguyen Thi Kim Ngan. Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli also addressed the Ho Chi Minh National Academy of Politics and the Viet Nam – Nepal Business Forum. Prior to the welcoming ceremony, Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli paid floral tribute and deep respect at President Ho Chi Minh’s Mausoleum, and laid a wreath at the Memorial of the Unknown Martyrs and Heroes. Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli will attend and address the United Nations Day of Vaisakh on 12 May 2019.

3. The official talks were held in a warm, cordial and friendly atmosphere. The two leaders discussed all aspects of the bilateral relations, and exchanged views on regional and international issues of mutual interest. Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli expressed his admiration for President Ho Chi Minh and congratulated Viet Nam on the latter’s tremendous achievements in socio-economic development. Prime Minister Nguyen Xuan Phuc expressed his gratitude to Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli for having chosen Viet Nam as his first destination in Southeast Asia since he took office in February 2018, underlining that the first visit of a Nepali Prime Minister to Viet Nam would contribute to strengthening the multifaceted relations between the two countries in the coming days. Prime Minister of Viet Nam congratulated the people of Nepal for the historic political achievement and for its’ unique and homegrown peace process and its institutionalization through a democratic constitution and the formation of a stable government. He lauded Nepal Government’s efforts to bring about visible transformation in the living standard of Nepali people and expressed his best wishes for the realization of the national resolve of Prosperous Nepal, Happy Nepali. Following the talks, the two leaders witnessed the signing of the Agreement on Visa exemption for diplomatic and official passport holders, the MOU on establishment of bilateral consultation mechanism between the two Ministries of Foreign Affairs and the Letter of Intent on negotiating and signing the framework Agreement on trade and investment cooperation.
4. Both leaders underlined the cultural and historical similarities between their countries, and recognized the importance of Buddhism as a strong binding thread between the peoples of the two countries. The two leaders noted that both Viet Nam and Nepal had to undergo various kinds of struggle to preserve sovereignty, territorial integrity and national independence.

5. Both sides welcomed practical commemorative activities to be held in 2020 for the 45th anniversary of their diplomatic relations. Both sides shared the views that the visit—a key milestone in their relations, would pave the way for a new stage and an enhanced level of cooperation in tourism, trade, investment and people to people contact between the two countries.

6. Acknowledging the remarkable progress in their bilateral relations and on the basis of mutual understanding and trust, the two leaders shared a vision on further widening and deepening the Viet Nam–Nepal traditional friendship across all areas.

7. Recalling their meeting on the sidelines of World Economic Forum in Davos in January 2019, the two leaders agreed to enhance mutual visits and exchanges at the high and all levels, between their political parties, governments, legislative institutions, local bodies and peoples.

8. Both sides welcomed the signing of the Agreement on visa exemption for diplomatic and official passport holders, the MOU on establishment of a bilateral consultation mechanism between their Foreign Ministries, the Letter of Intent on negotiating and signing the framework Agreement on trade and investment cooperation and underlined the importance of those agreements in promoting bilateral relations and cooperation in the years ahead.

9. Both leaders shared the assessment that their bilateral economic and trade cooperation remained far below their potentials and strengths. They welcomed the renewal of the MoU on cooperation between the Viet Nam Chamber of Commerce and Industry (VCCI) and the Nepal Chamber of Commerce (NCC) in April 2018, and tasked their relevant authorities to explore establishment of bilateral economic and trade cooperation mechanisms, encourage their businesses to survey each other’s market and participate in trade promotion activities, particularly in such areas as electric appliances, coffee, tea, seafood, textile, leather footwear and to explore new areas of cooperation, including energy, renewable energy, high-tech agriculture, and tourism.

10. Both leaders agreed to look into proposals of market access for the agricultural products that they held competitive edge, encourage information exchange and cooperation in agricultural science and technical research, and promote exchange of agricultural experts. Recognizing the desire of Nepal to graduate from LDC status at an early date, the Vietnamese side welcomed further imports of Nepali products into Viet Nam’s market and agreed to encourage Vietnamese investors and entrepreneurs to invest in productive sectors in Nepal.
11. Both sides agreed to exchange experience on law enforcement, information on criminals and consider negotiation and signing of agreements in order to create the legal framework for their cooperation in combating crimes and criminal justice, with immediate priority given to the signing of an agreement on crime prevention and combat between the Ministry of Public Security of Viet Nam and the Ministry of Home Affairs of Nepal.

12. The two sides agreed to enhance exchange and cooperation in culture, tourism and people-to-people interaction. Both leaders welcomed the success of the Nepali tourism promotion program in Ho Chi Minh City in March 2019, and agreed to encourage more tourists to each other’s tourist attractions. The Vietnamese side expressed its support to Visit Nepal Year 2020 by sending more tourists to Nepal, including Buddhist pilgrims to Lumbini, the birth place of Buddha and the fountain of Buddhism. Recalling the Memorandum of Arrangement between the aeronautical authorities of Viet Nam and Nepal of 20 October 2015, both sides underlined the need for establishing direct air service between the two countries and instructed the concerned Ministries to conclude an Agreement on Air Services at the earliest to promote trade, investment, tourism and people-to-people contacts. Both leaders commended the effective performance of the Nepal – Viet Nam Research Centre since its inception in November 2018 and agreed to promote establishment of the Viet Nam-Nepal Friendship Association in Ha Noi in the time to come.

13. Both sides agreed to bolster cooperation in other potential areas such as science and technology, information and communication, logistics, and disaster preparedness.

14. Both leaders shared similar views on various regional and international issues of mutual interest. They reiterated the importance of faithfully observing the Charter of the United Nations, principles of international law and norms. They reiterated their resolve to preserve multilateralism and find common solutions to common problems. They further reiterated the need to work together for a just, equitable, inclusive, rules-based and democratic world order.

15. Both Prime Ministers spoke highly of the cooperation between the two countries at regional and international forums, including the United Nations, and agreed to further strengthen this tradition. Prime Minister Nguyen Xuan Phuc expressed his gratitude to the Government of Nepal for supporting Viet Nam’s bid to become a non-permanent member of the UN Security Council for the term of 2020-2021.

16. Prime Minister of Nepal K P Sharma Oli expressed his gratitude to Prime Minister Nguyen Xuan Phuc and the people of Viet Nam for the warm welcome and gracious hospitality, and extended his cordial invitation to Prime Minister Nguyen Xuan Phuc to visit Nepal in the near future. Prime Minister Nguyen Xuan Phuc gladly accepted the invitation. The dates of the visit would be worked out through diplomatic channels.
1. At the invitation of Samdech Akka Moha Sena Padei Techo Hun Sen, Prime Minister of the Kingdom of Cambodia, the Rt. Hon. K. P. Sharma Oli, Prime Minister of Nepal, paid an official visit to the Kingdom of Cambodia on 13-15 May 2019. He was accompanied by his spouse Mrs. Radhika Shakya, Hon. Minister for Foreign Affairs Mr. Pradeep Kumar Gyawali, Advisors to the Prime Minister, Parliamentarians, high ranking Government officials and a business delegation.

2. The Prime Minister of Nepal and his spouse laid wreathes at the Monument of Independence and paid homage to the memory of the war heroes and heroines of Cambodia. They paid tribute and respect at the Royal Memorial of His Majesty Preah Bat Samdech Preah NORodom SIHANOUK, PREAH BOROM RATANAK KAUDH, the Late King Father of Cambodia. They visited National Museum and the Silver Pagoda, and also the Win-Win Monument which exhibits historical facts on Cambodia’s successful effort to bring about complete peace, national reconciliation and national unification of Cambodia.

3. During this visit, the Prime Minister of Nepal called on Samdech Vibol Sena Pheakdei Say Chhum, President of the Senate and Acting Head of State and also met with Samdech Akka Moha Ponhea Chakkrei Heng Samrin, President of the National Assembly.

4. The Prime Minister of Nepal had a bilateral meeting with Samdech Akka Moha Sena Padei Techo Hun Sen, Prime Minister of the Kingdom of Cambodia in an atmosphere of friendship and mutual understanding. Recalling his first visit to Nepal in November 2018, Samdech Prime Minister Hun Sen welcomed the return visit by Prime Minister K. P. Sharma Oli as a landmark visit, and noted that this visit would take the excellent relations already existing between the two friendly countries to new heights. Prime Minister K. P. Sharma Oli termed Cambodia as a close friend and an important partner of Nepal in the region.

5. The two Prime Ministers discussed in-depth on promoting bilateral cooperation in many areas including trade and investment, tourism, culture and education, and exchanged views on regional and international issues of mutual interest. They reaffirmed strong commitment to further deepen the friendly ties between Cambodia and Nepal which are deeply rooted in the shared cultural heritage of the two nations. Both Prime Ministers noted with satisfaction that Cambodia and Nepal have developed a strong and mutually beneficial partnership at bilateral, regional and multilateral levels for the sake of peace, stability and sustainable development of the two nations and the world.
6. Samdech Prime Minister Hun Sen highly commended Nepal’s historical political transformation and its unique homegrown peace process, and the prevailing stability in Nepal under the leadership of Prime Minister K. P. Sharma Oli, which has allowed the country to focus on sustainable socio-economic development. He expressed his best wishes for the realisation of Nepal’s national aspiration of “prosperous Nepal, happy Nepali”. Prime Minister K. P. Sharma Oli also lauded the continued success of the Cambodian Government in maintaining peace, stability, high economic growth, a robust tourism industry, and improvement in the quality of life of the Cambodian people, under the leadership of Samdech Prime Minister Hun Sen.

7. The two Prime Ministers underscored the importance of regular exchange of high-level visits and consultations that would afford ways and means to strengthen and expand bilateral cooperation in all feasible areas for the mutual benefits of both nations. Toward this end, the two leaders agreed that the process of consultation between the two foreign ministries should commence at the earliest.

8. Acknowledging that economic cooperation between Cambodia and Nepal still has much room for improvement, the two Prime Ministers concurred to task the institutions concerned of both countries to work together in order to increase bilateral trade, investment and tourism exchanges. They also stressed the important role of the private sector in economic development and encouraged close collaboration between the chambers of commerce of Cambodia and Nepal in fully exploiting economic potentials and business opportunities of both countries.

9. The two Prime Ministers witnessed the signing of the Framework Agreement on Trade and Investment between the Government of the Kingdom of Cambodia and the Government of Nepal, and a Memorandum of Understanding between the Chamber of Commerce of Cambodia and the Chamber of Commerce of Nepal. They welcomed the signing of the Agreement and the MoU, and expressed optimism that, with the conclusion of these two documents, economic, trade and investment activities between the two countries will grow significantly in the near future.

10. Recalling the signing of the Memorandum of Understandings on the concurrence of both sides to conclude an Air Services Agreement during the successful visit of Samdech Prime Minister Hun Sen to Nepal in November 2018, the two Prime Ministers instructed the respective civil aviation authorities to expedite discussion on the conclusion and implementation of the Air Services Agreement between the two countries. They shared the view that direct air linkage is needed to facilitate business and tourism exchanges between the two countries. The two leaders also agreed to urge all the relevant institutions of both countries to work closely together, such as through joint promotional activities and tapping into the rich cultural and natural heritage of both nations to increase tourism exchange.
11. Both Leaders noted with satisfaction that cultural cooperation is picking up following the signing of the Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) on Cultural Cooperation between the two countries on 29 November 2018. They expressed confidence that effective implementation of this MOU will not only promote mutual understanding and friendship, but also contribute to enhancing tourism industry of the two countries. Both leaders agreed to encourage people-to-people exchange through education cooperation as well.

12. The two Prime Ministers expressed satisfaction at the growing level of multilateral cooperation between Cambodia and Nepal, and agreed that the representatives of both countries should collaborate more closely on various regional and international fora, including the UN, for peace, stability, sustainable development and shared prosperity.

13. Both leaders jointly addressed the Cambodia-Nepal Business Forum and encouraged economic, trade and investment exchanges between the two countries.

14. Prime Minister K. P. Sharma Oli expressed his deep appreciation to Samdech Prime Minister Hun Sen and the people of Cambodia for the warm welcome and hospitality extended to him, his spouse and the accompanying delegates during their stay in Phnom Penh.

15. The Rt. Hon. Prime Minister of Nepal extended a cordial invitation to Samdech Prime Minister Hun Sen to visit Nepal at his convenience. Samdech Prime Minister Hun Sen accepted the invitation with pleasure, and thanked Prime Minister Oli for the invitation. The dates of the visit would be worked out through diplomatic channels.
JOINT UK-NEPAL COMMUNIQUÉ ON THE OCCASION OF THE VISIT OF THE PRIME MINISTER OF NEPAL TO THE UNITED KINGDOM

On the occasion of the visit to the United Kingdom of the Prime Minister of Nepal, Rt. Hon. K P Sharma Oli, Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs of the United Kingdom, Rt. Hon. Mr. Jeremy Hunt MP, and Minister for Foreign Affairs of Nepal, Hon. Mr. Pradeep Kumar Gyawali, agreed the following communique.

The United Kingdom and Nepal are long-time partners that have enjoyed diplomatic relations for over 200 years, by far the longest formal relationship Nepal has with any country. Today the relationship is broad, vibrant and diverse. This year we have witnessed progress against our shared objectives, and we commit to continued dialogue on issues of mutual interest.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) of the United Kingdom and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (MoFA) of Nepal acknowledged the long and distinguished service of Gurkhas in the British Army. The two sides recognised Gurkhas as a vital link in strengthening the bilateral relationship. Going forward, both sides agreed to continue discussion on Gurkha matters.

Both sides discussed the shared objective to strengthen the trade and investment relationship between Britain and Nepal, in line with Nepal’s “Prosperous Nepal, Happy Nepali” agenda. The FCO and MFA agreed on the important contribution the UK makes to supporting Nepal’s economic development as the country’s largest bilateral donor. Looking ahead, Nepal agreed to seek to improve still further the environment for inward investment and the UK will provide support to encourage potential investors to invest in Nepal. To help deliver this, both sides noted the progress made in negotiations on a Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement, and agreed the aim of it entering into force by 2020. Going forward, the UK welcomed Nepal’s desire to obtain a sovereign rating working with UK financial institutions.

Both sides acknowledged Nepal’s efforts to graduate from least developed country status at an early date and achieve the sustainable development goals by 2030. The FCO agreed to a strong development partnership that continued to support Nepal’s development efforts under the new polity. The MFA on behalf of the Government of Nepal appreciated DFID’s work to help the Nepali people including after the 2015 earthquakes through the National Reconstruction Authority. Going forward, both governments recognised each other’s strong leadership on climate change issues and agreed to work together, both bilaterally and multilaterally, to tackle this challenge.

The FCO and MFA agreed on the importance of supporting the international rules-based system and multilateralism. They reiterated the commitment of their governments to protecting and promoting human rights in line with international norms and standards, noting both countries were on the UN Human Rights Council. Looking ahead, both sides agreed to focus on tackling human trafficking. Nepal acknowledged the British Prime Minister’s leadership of, and commitment to, this agenda. The FCO welcomed Nepal’s ambition to ratify the Palermo Protocol in 2019 and the two sides agreed they will work together on this issue, including through DFID’s work in Nepal. Both sides expressed their commitment to freedom of expression and media freedom in line with their laws and regulations. The UK side informed that UK and Canada would host Media Freedom conference in London in July 2019 and requested for Nepal’s participation.

Both sides reaffirmed their commitment to building on our strong and enduring partnership. They welcomed efforts to bring Nepali and British young people closer together, welcoming the work of the British Council, which they were pleased was celebrating its 60th anniversary in Nepal. They agreed that other educational initiatives, including the work by UK universities offering degrees in Nepal, the Chevening Scholarship Programme and the British Government’s Girls Education projects in Nepal, would support Nepal’s development. The UK welcomed Nepal’s official recognition of UK A-Level qualifications.

The FCO and the MFA celebrated the strong people-to-people ties between the two countries. They welcomed the Nepal government’s work to strengthen its economy by attracting more tourists, including through their VisitNepal2020 Campaign. The FCO also extended its support to make this campaign a success. They were pleased to note the number of visitors to Nepal from the UK had risen to over 60,000. Both sides welcomed the many contributions of the Nepali diaspora to public life in Britain. Both sides appreciated the work of hundreds of civil society organisations and individuals who help keep the relationship between Britain and Nepal vibrant.

The two sides agreed to build on the broad and robust foundation of our past, for an even stronger relationship to tackle the issues that matter to us both in the future.

V. Major Statements

STATEMENT BY PRESIDENT MRS. BIDYA DEVI BHANDARI AT COP24

3 December 2018 Katowice, Poland

Mr. Chairperson,

Nepal is a least developed country, comprised of the Himalayas, mountains and the plains known as the Terai.

We have been bearing the brunt of disproportionate impacts of climate change despite being a low carbon-emitting country.

Himalayan glaciers are melting; snow-capped mountains are becoming dark and dull; the possibility of glacial lake outbursts is high; and the river-basin system is adversely affected.

Avalanches, floods and landslides, and droughts have become more erratic than ever before.

The rural drinking-water system has been disturbed because of the undesirable impacts on natural resources.

We are compelled to spend significant amount of our national income in addressing disasters-induced problems.

Main productive land of Terai, ‘the granary’ of Nepal, is frequently affected by floods and inundation. Even more severe is the impact on agriculture sector.

Such disasters and incidences have more direct bearing on women and indigent people. We know the hardship of rural women, who are compelled to spend hours to fetch water for household consumption.

We feel as if we have been penalized for the mistakes we never made.

I would like to reiterate that it is incumbent upon the international community to ensure that justice is done.

We believe that the commitment to maintain the threshold of 1.5 degree Celsius as outlined in the recent IPCC Special Report will further encourage the world community to traverse resolutely in the path of low carbon emission.
We are a country that has been immensely contributing to controlling global warming.

Himalayan Ranges and high mountains including the Mt. Everest contribute to keeping air and water cool, refreshing and pure.

In fact, mountains and oceans form organic linkages to influence climate and weather patterns.

These mountains melt slowly yet continuously to recharge and humidify the land.

This water recharging system has a prime importance in controlling the temperature of the earth.

Value of such natural phenomenon should be realized by the high carbon emitting countries as well as the developed ones and ensure that the environment of mountainous countries is not exacerbated.

We are effortful in minimizing the vulnerability of climate change through the design and implementation of model projects as well as through measures such as National and Local Adaptation and Mitigation Plans of Action.

With a view to effectively implement the Paris Agreement, we are planning to review the Policy and update Nationally Determined Contributions to make them more relevant in the present context. A long-term strategy is being formulated for their implementation.

We have already started the use of electric vehicles at the President’s Office and we have a policy to extend this to other areas as well.

The Government of Nepal has initiated the President Chure Conservation Program with a view to implementing, in an integrated way, the environment conservation and livelihood programs in the Chure area, popularly known as Shiwalik in Nepal. We believe that this project will contribute to the protection and conservation of the environment of not only the Chure area but also the neighboring countries.

We are confident that the support and cooperation of the international community will be there in mobilizing knowledge, skills, technology and climate finance in our efforts to promoting study of Himalayan hydrological sciences, supporting sustainable mountain economy, pursuing economic and social development for shifting into renewable energy, employment generation, and ensure access of all Nepal is to clean energy.

We also believe that climate finance is critical also for developing e-mobility, reducing vulnerability of women and the poor, improving public health, and promotion of forests and natural system in the form of carbon sink.
Nepal remains committed to make the project implementation climate friendly and development efforts compatible with the Sustainable Development Goals.

It is our collective responsibility to protect our own and that of the future generations’ right to live in clean and safe natural environment.

Nepal is confident that CoP 24 will find pathways for the effective and faithful implementation of the Paris Accord.

Finally, I hope that this Conference will be able to make significant contributions to the global campaign of environment protection and conservation. I would like to extend my best wishes for the success of this Conference.

I thank you all.
STATEMENT BY THE RT. HON. PRESIDENT AT THE HIGH-LEVEL MEETING OF THE SECOND BELT AND ROAD FORUM FOR INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION

26 April 2019 Beijing

H.E. Xi Jinping, President of the People’s Republic of China,
Excellencies,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

I have brought to you all warm greetings and best wishes from the Government and people of Nepal, the land of Buddha and Sagarmatha, the highest peak on earth.

I would like to express my sincere thanks to H.E. Xi Jinping for the kind invitation to attend this important event and for the warm hospitality accorded to us. I would also like to congratulate the Government and people of China on the occasion of 70th anniversary of founding of the People’s Republic of China.

The world today is at the cusp of profound transformation. In many parts of the world, poverty has been reduced, access to health and education has become easier, and many economies are heading towards prosperity. The unprecedented scale of technological revolution has opened a vista of possibilities.

Those achievements would have been impossible were it not for cooperation.

Those gains would have been unthinkable were it not for collaboration.

However, the new as well as old challenges are conspicuous. The distribution of wealth is strikingly uneven. Promises of development have not yielded for many. Millions of people are still trapped in the vicious cycle of poverty.

The very foundation of cooperation and collaboration is facing scepticism. Protectionism and isolationist tendencies have surfaced.

Such regressive response will not only jeopardize the hard-earned gains, but also be unjust for future generations.

We have to acknowledge that the existence of poverty in any corner of the world can be a threat to the whole world.
Therefore, proliferation of several challenges calls for more collaboration, not less.

Unfinished pursuit of development calls for more cooperation, not less.

The quest for brighter and better future calls for more connectivity, not less.

Asia is a powerhouse of the world economy. For the future of global prosperity, the region is well poised to play a pivotal role. A region with many rich civilizations, Asia’s future should be that of inclusivity and partnership.

The far-sighted vision of President Xi to build a community of shared future for mankind through Belt and Road Initiative (BRI) carries a huge potential. It is an important framework for collaboration, for cooperation and for connectivity.

Mutual efforts for mutual benefit; inclusive development for fair and equitable world order; and the green development for the good health of the people and planet embody its spirit.

It lays emphasis on boosting connectivity, developing infrastructure, connecting markets and enhancing cooperation among the nations in diverse sectors in the region and beyond.

It promotes openness in place of isolation, cooperation in place of confrontation and win-win cooperation in place of zero-sum game.

Vis-à-vis the huge resource gap in global level, BRI can play an instrumental role in implementing the Sustainable Development Goals.

And, BRI is the engine for prosperous future where not a single country is excluded from the fruit of development.

For a landlocked country like Nepal, connectivity is of paramount importance in its socio-economic development. With enhanced connectivity, vast opportunities for trade, investment, tourism and people-to-people relations will open up.

The development of ‘Trans-Himalayan Multi-Dimensional Connectivity Network’, including Nepal-China Cross-Border Railway, will boost connectivity not only between Nepal and China but other countries in the region.

After a prolonged political transition Nepal has achieved political stability. Our objective ahead is to bring about visible transformation in the living standard of our people.

Our national aspiration is guided by the motto Prosperous Nepal, Happy Nepali. Our immediate goal is to graduate from LDC status. We intend to become a middle-income country by achieving the Sustainable Development Goals well before 2030.
We would like to enhance bilateral as well as multilateral collaboration and cooperation with neighbours, other friendly countries including development partners to overcome our development challenges.

To conclude, while expressing firm conviction that the Second Belt and Road Forum for International Cooperation will be successful in building up our concerted efforts for a just, fair, equitable, inclusive and rules-based world order for lasting global peace and prosperity, I would like to express my best wishes for the grand success of this Forum.

Thank you!
Your Excellency President Xi Jinping
Excellencies,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

At the outset, I would like to extend my sincere thanks to Your Excellency President for your insightful and visionary remarks at the opening ceremony yesterday.

The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development is for the people, for our planet and for prosperity. This vision is for the kind of development which is transformative, inclusive and equitable. Indeed, sustainable development without inclusivity will be a mere illusion.

The realization of this ambitious vision is possible only through an enhanced level of co-operation among nations.

It is with this vision that Nepal has embodied the Sustainable Development Goals in its domestic policies, plans and programmes. We are in favor of strengthening the mandate of the United Nations for development.

This is a happy coincidence that the spirit of the Belt and Road Initiative, which aims to achieve development and prosperity leaving no one behind, corresponds with Agenda 2030.

Belt and Road Initiative, today, is becoming a key driver for poverty alleviation, employment generation, infrastructure building and industrial transformation.

In view of widening financial gap, it will significantly help many countries to implement the Agenda 2030.

The clock of caution is ticking louder when it comes to climate change. Unsustainable patterns of production and consumption have accelerated environmental degradation. Unfortunately, countries like Nepal are bearing the brunt of climate change despite their negligible emissions. Women and underprivileged community have been its main victims. The only way forward is development of green economy. The time has come to review the development models which are detrimental from environmental perspectives. The research findings have indicated that our posterity will not only face uncertainty but their future will be jeopardized if we fail to maintain the ecological balance of the planet.

Sustainable development under this circumstance will only be an illusion if such a situation is not altered. In this context, while balancing all the three components of sustainable development, the Belt and Road Initiative can serve as an important medium in transforming to clean-energy and low-carbon pathways of economy.

Similarly, cooperation in emerging industries like information technology can generate substantial growth. To minimize the environmental risks, scientific researches and solutions based on them should be sought.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Nepal is a country of the high Himalayas. These high peaks serve as the heat sink during the summer and heat source in winter. Forming an integral part of the organically linked ecosystem, they are common heritage of humanity.

Also, there is tremendous potential in developing clean energy in Nepal through hydropower. It can greatly contribute to the green development of Nepal as well as its neighbours.

It is a matter of happiness that Nepal, which was connected to the southern route of the ancient Silk Road, is now linked with Belt and Road Initiative. We believe that this Initiative will support the process of economic transformation of landlocked Nepal by expanding its connectivity networks and integrating its economy into the global market.

In addition, we expect that Belt and Road Initiative will greatly contribute to eradicating poverty, deepening and expanding trade, revolutionizing industries, creating jobs and improving the living conditions of the people by increasing economic opportunities.

There is a Chinese maxim: “building roads is the first step towards prosperity”. We are now creating the necessary foundations to realize the long-term goal of development and prosperity. In this context, we have laid primary emphasis on the development of Trans-Himalayan Multidimensional Connectivity Network under Belt and Road Initiative.

The objective of “peace and cooperation, openness and inclusiveness, mutual learning and mutual benefit,” which is the spirit of the ancient Silk Road, and embraced by Belt and Road Initiative, will help us realize the SDGs.

Thank you!
STATEMENT BY PRIME MINISTER K P SHARMA OLI AT THE 73rd SESSION OF UNITED NATIONS GENERAL ASSEMBLY

New York, 27 September 2018

Madam President,

I extend warm felicitations to you on your election to the presidency of this Assembly.

The outgoing President deserves our appreciation for successfully steering the Assembly’s work.

We commend the Secretary General, Mr. Antonio Gutteres, for the dedication, commitment and leadership with which he has been serving the Organization.

As we commemorate the 100th birth anniversary of Nelson Mandela, I would like to pay my profound respect to him and for the cause he fought for. An iconic figure, he was a great human soul and remains a source of inspiration for peace, justice, harmony, forgiveness and reconciliation.

This year we have lost an outstanding diplomat and visionary Secretary General Kofi Annan. I also pay sincere tributes for the tremendous contributions he made to promote peace, development and human rights in the world.

Madam President,

I bring greetings and best wishes from the Land of Buddha and Sagarmatha also known as Mount Everest for the success of this session.

Since I addressed from this podium in 2006, Nepal has undergone historic political transformation.

Through dialogue and deliberations, through mutual respect and accommodation, we steered a uniquely successful home-grown, nationally led and owned peace process.

It was about peaceful transformation of an armed conflict.

It was about restructuring of the State and promoting unity in diversity;

It was about making Nepali people truly sovereign and as source of state power; and

It was about institutionalizing and consolidating all those achievements in a democratic constitution through a popularly elected Constituent Assembly.
Despite the difficulties in the wake of devastating earthquakes, the political leaders rose to the occasion with a common resolve to promulgate the constitution in September 2015, thereby fulfilling the seven-decade long people’s aspiration to write their own constitution.

The Constitution of Nepal not only consolidates democratic polity under a federal republican order, but also embodies extensive rights and freedoms of the people. Separation of power, checks and balances, the rule of law, independence of judiciary, periodic elections, inclusive and proportional representation are the defining features of the Constitution.

Our vision is of a comprehensive democracy that empowers individuals not only politically but also socially, economically and culturally.

Implementing the Constitution was another paramount task before us. We accomplished this historic task last year through free, fair and impartial elections of federal, provincial and local levels with record turnout and the participation of the people from all sections of our society. Most importantly, the elections brought 41 percent of women into elected bodies. We remain committed to bridging the gap of the remaining 9 percent.

The elections not only ensured democratic rights of Nepali people in the widest possible manner, it has also produced a strong government in many years. The Government that I head has over three-fourth support of the parliament. Governments in the provinces also enjoy strong majority support. We have achieved much needed political stability through these landmark elections.

With these historic achievements, we have laid the foundation towards creating an egalitarian and just society where all citizens are treated equally and receive equal protection and opportunities. Social justice remains at the center of our polity.

The United Nations and the international community supported our peace process for which we are grateful.

Nepal’s case is a unique example of peaceful and democratic transformation. It is a telling testimony that dialogue triumphs the differences; and ballot triumphs the bullets.

We believe that what Nepal has achieved in conflict transformation can be an inspiring success story for many people longing for peace in different parts of the world. We are willing to share our experiences and provide our insights.

With hard lessons learned in the arduous journey of democratic transition, we have now emerged as a confident nation, capable of sustaining political gains and undertaking a course for economic transformation. Cognizant of the need for accelerating the process of development, my Government has set a vision for ‘Prosperous Nepal and Happy Nepali’.
We will realize this vision with the right mix of prudent utilization of natural resources and the optimal mobilization and management of human resources that we are endowed with. We count on continued goodwill, support and cooperation from the international community in our development endeavours.

Our foreign policy guides us to maintain amity with all and enmity with none. It has shaped our independent outlook on global issues which we consider on merit basis.

We believe that regional and global efforts complement our national development efforts.

In line with our foreign policy priority to regional cooperation, we have recently hosted the 4th Summit meeting of BIMSTEC. We would like to see a revitalized SAARC as an important regional organization.

Excellencies,

The world today is at an important juncture; with a unique juxtaposition of perils and promises.

Challenges ranging from poverty, terrorism, climate change, food insecurity, forced displacement and natural disasters to arms race continue to confront the global community. Intra-sate conflicts have taken heavy toll on millions of lives. For the first time in decades, world hunger is rising after a prolonged decline.

In many regions, peace remains obscure. Inequality within nations, as well as among them, is increasing. Countries have failed to adopt sustainable production and consumption patterns.

In this context, the theme of the general debate “Making the United Nations relevant to all people: Global leadership and shared responsibilities for peaceful, equitable and sustainable societies” resonates well the need of our time.

Madam President, Nepal supports the seven priority areas that you eloquently outlined in your inaugural address to this Assembly earlier this week.

I hope the current session will seriously deliberate on these priority areas with seriousness and urgency they deserve. Here lies our political will and determination.

With this commitment we must ensure that the voice of the people struggling for their rights, liberty, freedom and justice in various parts of the world, including Syria, Yemen, Palestine, and many other places must be heard and addressed.

Madam President,

The pursuit of making the UN relevant to all people is well captured in the philosophy of ‘leaving no one behind’.
In its third year, global efforts in the implementation of the 2030 Agenda appear too few and far insufficient. Needless to say, the least developed countries are the battleground on which the 2030 Agenda will be won or lost.

Development in LDCs appears dismal despite a record performance of global economy. International support measures are failing to make a dent. Implementation of the internationally agreed commitments made in their favour is far below our expectation.

Reaching furthest behind first is not a luxury. It is not a charity either. It is an international obligation, a duty and social responsibility.

The impact will be fully realized only when external support measures respect national ownership and leadership, are aligned with national priorities, come through national system, while they help build productive capacity, job creation and develop human resources.

Only through smooth access to market, removal of trade barriers, injecting finance and investment, building capacity and transfer of technology and overcoming the infrastructural bottlenecks can enable LDCs and LLDCs take path to sustainable development and integrate themselves in the global value chains.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

When it comes to climate change; the clock of caution is ticking loud.

The impact of climate change burdens the poorest and the most vulnerable countries, like my own country Nepal, despite their negligible emission. We cannot remain a bystander when snow-clad mountains, known as water towers of the world, are receding and glaciers are retreating, erratic weather patterns causing floods and inundation in the plains. It is an unpleasant irony that we have been victim of the catastrophes that we did not contribute for its causality.

The impacts of climate change on mountain and small island countries have been felt as existential threat. The loss of lives, properties and bio-diversity, and increasing phenomenon of calamities are becoming untenable.

A matching and robust response is required. We cannot evade from the responsibility nor will there be any excuse for inaction. We must act decisively in ensuring climate justice that respects the principle of common but differentiated responsibilities and respective capabilities. To make this happen, international cooperation and collaboration for adaption and mitigation is sine qua non. The Paris Agreement must be implemented in its entirety and good faith.

Madam President,
The health and wellbeing of our children and youths is an investment for future. Delivering quality education, imparting skills, and spurring innovation can make a virtuous composite to enable youths to be relevant and be able to contribute to society and nation building.

We must support for the full development of their potentials, their creativity and energy to flourish. Inculcating entrepreneurial spirit and creating decent job opportunities for the youths can fuel economic development and help positively transform our societies.

At the same time, we must also inculcate them with the civil and moral values so that they become a force for harmony and tolerance in society.

Madam President,

The frontiers of technologies are ever expanding, and they have been major driving force for societal transformation. But the digital dividend is unevenly distributed, while the digital divide is widening.

Technology has been a powerful agent of change and transformation. At the same time, technological revolution is disruptive. The developing countries, especially LDCs, are struggling to cope with the new modes of production and consumption. We must create an environment to ensure easy access to affordable technology and free the barriers for their transfer. This will provide a level playing field to all countries to benefit and propel economic growth through new technologies.

This year, the UN has taken boldest of the reform initiatives in decades. The cross-pillar restructuring of the organization gives us an important opportunity to strengthen its development pillar and prove its efficiency in delivery.

We believe that the repositioned UN development system will better deliver on 2030 Agenda.

To ensure a sound system, learning the new methods by a new generation of Country Teams is important. But more than that, unlearning the old habits – that implored us to undertake this reform – is equally important.

What matters also in the reform is the transformation of the culture. The new culture must have accountability, transparency and national ownership at its core.

Nepal welcomes the reforms undertaken in peace and security architecture as well as management of the organization. UN should reflect the mosaic of its membership, and achieve greater efficiency and effectiveness.

The Security Council reform is long overdue. Any reform must reflect the current realities and ensure justice to historically under-represented and developing countries.
Nepal reaffirms its principled stand for a general and complete disarmament of all weapons of mass destruction.

In this context, we welcome the recent efforts made by the United States and two Koreas towards denuclearization and peace and stability of the Korean peninsula.

Nepal welcomes the Secretary General’s Agenda for Disarmament with a hope of renewed impetus to disarmament. Nepal commends the beginning of deliberations under the ‘Kathmandu Process’ for developing innovative confidence building measures in the Asia Pacific region.

No region is immune from the menace of terrorism. Nepal strongly condemns all acts of terrorism, committed by whomever and for whatever purposes. Nepal calls for an early conclusion of a comprehensive convention against terrorism.

Madam President,

Never has been the issue of human mobility so prominent in the agenda of the United Nations. Nepal looks forward to the December Conference for the formal adoption of the Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration.

Ensuring human rights and wellbeing of all migrant workers remain our priority. Nepal believes that the Compact will serve this purpose and make migration work for all.

Nepal has hosted thousands of refugees for decades on a humanitarian ground. The international community must uphold the refugees’ right to return to their homeland safely and with full dignity.

Madam President,

The complexities and intractability of global conflicts render the current thrust on conflict prevention even more important. Mediation, an under-utilised tool, can be applicable in all phases of the conflict continuum.

Nepal recently marked the six decades of partnership for peace with the UN. Nepal has responded to every call, even at the shortest notice and without national caveats.

Nepal welcomes the Secretary General’s initiative of ‘Action for Peacekeeping’ and has endorsed the Declaration on Peacekeeping Operations. Troops and police contributing countries must be given fair opportunities to serve at the leadership positions both in the headquarters and the field missions.

A sustained partnership for capacity building of peacekeepers and providing for their safety and security can enhance performance of peace operations. Nepal condemns attacks on peacekeepers. Ending the indignity of sexual exploitation and abuse is a must.
Nonetheless, peace missions alone cannot substitute the home-grown preventive as well as conflict resolution measures. Our own experience tells that peacekeeping cannot do what the politically negotiated settlements can.

Excellencies,

Nepal’s commitment to the protection and promotion of human rights is total and unflinching. We hold that development, democracy and respect for human rights as interdependent and mutually reinforcing.

As a member of the Human Rights Council, we will continue to play our constructive role to deliver on Council’s mandates.

The ongoing transitional justice process in Nepal respects the comprehensive peace accord as well as the ground reality for sustaining peace and delivering justice. We will not allow impunity in serious violations of human rights and humanitarian laws.

Madam President,

We are living in an uncertain world. Cold-war rivalries are re-surfacing. Trade tensions are building up. Multilateralism is being questioned.

The Secretary General’s opening statement largely captures the realities of contemporary world and the sentiment of the Member States; be it in the field of peace and security or in sustainable development, climate change, migration and technology.

We underscore the centrality of the United Nations as the most legitimate multilateral forum to deliberate on the challenges that we all confront globally. It is the obligation of all Member States to preserve the sanctity of multilateralism and uphold respect for international law. The problems that we confront today at global scale can only be overcome by global collaboration and partnership in absolute trust and confidence.

We are yet to make international system truly inclusive that promotes fairness, equality and justice for all states, bigger or smaller.

Before I conclude, Madam President, let me reiterate Nepal’s profound commitment to the principles and purposes enshrined in the UN Charter. We remain as firm as we have been in past 63 years since we joined this organization.

The onus to give direction to the world lies on us. Our collective wisdom and leadership should aim at the realization of aspiration of all for peace and prosperity.

Let us make a collective resolve that the 21st century history will not be written as a history of confrontation and conflict; of poverty, exclusion and under-development; of injustice and exploitation.
It should rather be a history of cooperation and harmony; of prosperity, inclusion and development; and of justice and fairness.

Thank you
Thank you, Mr. Tom Nagorski, for the kind words of introduction.
The Hon’ble Kevin Rudd, Former Prime Minister of Australia
Distinguished Ladies and Gentlemen:

I begin by thanking the Asia Society for having me here today. I am also delighted to have former Prime Minister Rudd with us.

Today, I stand before you to share my thoughts on peace, democracy and development. Nepali people have emerged through various struggles and transformations, at different junctures of history.

At one point of time, our forefathers fought against the imperialistic forces and our sovereignty and independence was preserved, by their courage, and patriotism. The generation of my parents, who were ordinary peasants, had to fight to free themselves from the clutches of feudalism and oppressive regime. Their struggle uprooted the despotic family rule of Ranas.

And, my generation had to fight against an autocratic monarchy. This was our final assault on an illiberal and undemocratic regime.

Now, the course of Nepal’s political history has changed. We are a democratic republic. But our fight is continuing in a different form; as a fight against poverty, underdevelopment and backwardness.

In the course of history, our political gains have not come without heavy price. Several compatriots made ultimate sacrifice and got martyrdom. Many lived in political exile while others were brutalized and suppressed.

I feel a bit emotional when I recall those dark 14 years that I spent in jail, including four years of solitary confinement. My crime was that I fought against autocratic regime. But this never deterred, rather emboldened me to continue the struggle.

Ladies and gentlemen,
As a result of our sustained struggle, democracy was restored in 1990. However, our fight for full-fledged democracy continued. We had never relented in our efforts. Nor was there any complacency towards our ultimate goal of a progressive democratic republic.
An armed conflict that began in 1996 was successfully resolved through a peace accord signed in November 2006.

Key to this process was the famous 12-point agreement forged in November 2005. I was among those who played an important role in forging consensus to advance this process and bring the rebellion force to a negotiating table.

This brought the seven party political alliance and the rebellion force together to mount a combined people’s movement against an absolute monarch who had snatched people’s rights through unconstitutional means.

The ensuing result forced the monarch to capitulate. The armed conflict ended, and peace process began. The restored parliament clipped the wings of the ruling monarchy and suspended it until it was finally abolished two years later by a democratically elected Constituent Assembly.

The Constituent Assembly, was highly inclusive having representation from all gender, castes, tribes, linguistic groups, faith communities, cultures, geographical length and breadth of the country.

Dear Friends,
After 7 years of consultations and deliberations, arguments and debates, demands and pressures, peaceful agitation and campaigning, a highly progressive and democratic constitution was finally written, for the first time by people’s representatives.

As a leader of the second largest political party of that time I had an important responsibility to steer the process to a successful conclusion.

Finally, the Constitution was promulgated on 20 September 2015. It has finally settled the political issues that the country confronted for a long period of time.

This was a watershed moment in the political history of modern Nepal.

I believe that the future generations we may not have to go through the similar course of struggle for rights and freedoms anymore.

Through the Constitution we consolidated democratic polity, republican order, periodic elections, universally recognized human rights, separation of power with checks and balances, rule of law, independent judiciary, and inclusive and proportional representation system.

Implementation of the constitution is as much important as its promulgation. I had the privilege of serving the nation as the first Prime Minister under the new constitution. It was thus incumbent upon my government to take decisive steps to implement the constitution as per the roadmap it has provided.
The Constitution came into full implementation after the free and fair democratic elections held last year for the federal, provincial and local levels. With a historic electoral turnout, the elections resulted in 41 percent of women’s representation, and formation of stable and democratic governments at all three tiers of the federation.

The Government I head enjoys three-fourth support of the parliament. The ‘Policies and Programmes’ of my Government were unanimously endorsed by the parliament, an exercise seen rarely in a competitive democracy. This proves that the fellow Nepalis reposed trust in our leadership and our ability to deliver.

Dear Friends,

We steered a successful peace process through inclusive political dialogues and deliberations and spirit of accommodation.

Ours was a home-grown, nationally led and owned peace process. In the process:

- We managed to reconcile competing demands and aspirations of our diverse population;
- We ensured equal participation of all stakeholders and heard their voice;
- We recognized the important role of women in conflict resolution and peace process;
- We transformed state structures and institutions to mirror the mosaic of our society; and
- We brought the government closer to the people through restructuring of the State.

The major thrust of the peace process has been to promote reconciliation in society healing the wounds of conflict period.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I have a clear vision for the development of the country. I am aware of our strengths, challenges and limitations.

To sustain the political gains and deliver on the development dividend to our people, my Government has set a long-term goal of “Prosperous Nepal and Happy Nepali”.

To realize this goal, we must:

- Eradicate poverty,
  – Eliminate inequality and discrimination,
  – Create employment opportunities,
  – Ensure social justice,
– Promote good governance, and

– Ensure effective service delivery,

Our aim is to attain a comprehensive democracy that empowers individuals in all spheres of national life – political, economic, social and cultural. I have a conviction that full realization of SDGs, makes this possible.

Nepal is a resource-rich country. But the level of development is well below our potentials. This mismatch must come to an end sooner than later.

We have identified the drivers of economic growth. These include no other vital sectors than agriculture, energy, industries, transport, infrastructure, information technology, tourism, and urban development.

For making economic progress sustainable, parallel attention will be given to the climate change mitigation, adaptation and preservation of bio-diversity.

Nepal is safe for foreign investment. The Government remains committed to further improving business and investment climate in the country.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Now, let me turn briefly to Nepal’s foreign policy priorities. Nepal is the oldest independent state in our region, with her own distinguished and glorious history.

Amity with all, and enmity with none remains at the heart of Nepal’s foreign policy. This is inspired by the principles of UN Charter, Panchasheel, non-alignment, international law, and norms of world peace.

We enjoy cordial and friendly relations with both our immediate neighbours, India and China. Economic growth and prosperity in neighbourhood offer us a promising prospect for the development of our country.

Our relations with major powers and development partners have been all along cordial and friendly. We would like to further develop and expand our cooperative partnership with them. Extended neighbourhood and labour destination countries are also in our foreign policy priority.

Nepal has been playing an active role for the promotion of regional cooperation under SAARC and BIMSTEC.

On multilateral front, Nepal’s efforts will be directed towards promoting a rule-based, just and equitable international order in which all States- small and big- fulfill their international obligations in good faith, and all countries enjoy equitable opportunities to fulfill aspirations for development and prosperity.

Before I conclude, ladies and gentlemen, I would like to state that Nepal’s commitment to democracy and fundamental freedoms is total and unflinching. The long journey of our political struggle is synonymous to the struggle for democracy.

We will not allow any compromise on democratic norms, values and principles. We believe that democracy, development and respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms are interdependent and mutually reinforcing.

With these words, I conclude my remarks. I would be delighted to engage with you all in the interactive discussion.

Thank you.
STATEMENT BY PRIME MINISTER MR. K.P. SHARMA OLI AT UN UNIVERSITY FOR PEACE

01 October 2018 San Jose, Costa Rica

Dr. Francisco Rojas Aravena, Rector of the University
Distinguished Professors
Members of the Faculty
Dear Students and Scholars
Senior Officials of the Government of Costa Rica
Excellencies
Members of My Delegation, and
Ladies and Gentlemen

Let me, at the outset, convey my deep gratitude to His Excellency Mr. Carlos Alvarado Quesada, the President of the Republic of Costa Rica, for the kind invitation extended to me to pay an official visit to this country. I thank the Government of Costa Rica for their warm reception and generous hospitality provided to me, my wife Radhika and my delegation.

It is my distinct pleasure and honour to be here at this University.

I had heard a lot of good things about Costa-Rica. I am pleased to be in this part of the world, and this beautiful land that hosts the prestigious University for Peace, an important institution that is working towards the realization of the UN charter’s vision for peace and security.

I thought that this was an appropriate forum to share my views on peace and democracy following my participation in the UN General Assembly. Nothing could be a more relevant forum than this University.

I thank the Rector and the whole University family for your kind invitation. What touches me more is your decision to confer the honorary doctorate degree on me today. I am humbled to accept this great honour with a deep sense of gratitude.

For me, this honour is an acknowledgement of my country’s successful peace process and appreciation of peace-loving Nepali people.

Moreover, with humility, I must submit that this recognition is bestowed on a citizen of the country that gave birth to Buddha – an apostle of peace.

I must commend the University for its Immense Contribution, as a center of learning and research, to promoting the culture of understanding, tolerance and peace around the world,
Today, it is my great privilege to address the distinguished audience of erudite scholars, professors and students, among others.

I am pleased to share with the distinguished audience that Nepal has become party to the agreement establishing the University. This is a reflection of our deep commitment to universal peace.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Last week, I attended and addressed the General Debate of the 73rd Session of the UN General Assembly. The world leaders gathered in the Assembly spoke of a myriad of challenges that we face today.

Backlashes against multilateralism; growing incidences of terrorism and violent extremism; perpetuating poverty and increasing inequality; rising temperature and rising sea levels; continuing civil wars and sectarian strife; persistent food insecurity were among the issues that prominently figured during the Debate.

No matter where the leaders came from; no matter which countries they represented, they were united in their call for a peaceful planet, shared progress and prosperity of humanity.

In the march against many of these woes, the institutions like this University should be in the frontline. For, they have the answer to the many dilemmas we face today.

Education that inculcates tolerance and compassion, respects diversity and accommodates differences while unleashing the infinite potential of human mind is the answer to the problems the humanity faces today.

After all, education is a lifelong process. As a student, one accumulates knowledge and sharpens skills, which later can be used to navigate the world.

Education is also about making oneself updated and relevant, for what we know and what we do not know today may change.

Education that cultivates culture of peace and tolerance while inspiring innovation and invention is the answer to the dilemmas that the world faces today.

Such education is a building block to build the citadel of peace and prosperity.

I, therefore, would like to commend the contributions that this University has made as a hub of knowledge for conflict prevention and peace.

Ladies and Gentlemen,
Contemporary world is a confluence of achievements as well as setbacks, of progress as well as perils, of hope as well as despair.

While the world has witnessed impressive economic growth and phenomenal technological progress, the benefit has not accrued to all equitably. Inhumane poverty still persists. Inequality within and among societies and nations is increasing.

Thousands of lives have been lost due to the civil wars and violent conflicts. The menace of terrorism has not abated, and its tentacles threaten the humanity in every part of the world.

Extremism that doesn’t respect diversity and pluralistic nature of human society is showing its ugly head. We must note that diversity is inherent in nature; and no one can go against this.

The ecological balance has been upset. With the temperature rising, glaciers retreating, snow melting and sea level rising, the climate change has accelerated. And, our responses do not match the enormous challenges that are the results of human recklessness.

Unfortunately, it is the countries with negligible emissions that are bearing the heavy price of climate change. This is unfair and thus unacceptable. We together have the responsibility to hand over a habitable planet to our future generations. We must fulfill our accountability towards them.

With the fourth industrial revolution, many groundbreaking achievements have been made. However, the benefit of technological progress has not been judiciously shared among all. The disruptive potential of such change in the world of work is yet to be assessed fully.

With the millions of people on the move, migration today is a mega trend. The response is needed to ensure that people migrate as a choice but not by compulsion. The world needs to come together to ensure the human rights of migrants and to make migration safe, orderly and regular.

Today, the problems are more interconnected than ever. They are not confined to the borders of countries and continents. They are not confined to particular race and nation.

However, the tendencies undermining multilateralism and search for global solutions are gaining ground.

At the time when response should be joint and collective, rhetoric of isolationism is a regressive move.

At the time when international cooperation should be made more robust, protectionism and erosion of trust in the entire edifice of rule-based international order is a discouraging move, which is unfortunate.
I believe that the world needs, more than ever, to reassert its faith in multilateralism and collective solutions.

And, it is equally important to resurrect and reinvent the rule-based international order, which is inclusive and accommodative of the voices of all countries, no matter how small or big, rich or poor, developed or developing.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

A deeper reflection reveals that many maladies of modern times are rooted in human minds. The attitude of violence sown in some human minds begets wars and human tragedy. The excess of greed breeding, in some, begets conflict and corruption. The veil of ignorance imbedded, in some, begets culture of intolerance.

For this reason, foundation of peace should be built in the minds of people. This is also the essence of culture of peace.

The potential of human mind is not optimally realized. Human imagination, innovation and invention have brought tremendous break-throughs in the history.

And this potential of human mind is not yet fully realized. There are millions of people living in backwardness, who, if provided with proper education and opportunity, will be instrumental in rowing the raft of progress. We have to identify the willing minds and invest in them for their fuller development.

Not all people are equal in terms of their capacity. Not all share similar interest in the same subject. Therefore, the role of education is to identify and spur the hidden individual potential through appropriate tools including counseling.

Memory power, and creative ingenuity as well as imaginative power are the two aspects that make human minds superior to others.

Prosperity and progress in isolated enclaves cannot sustain forever if a large chunk of humanity is lagging behind without being able to realize its full potential.

Education should enable human beings to harness the nature’s enormous potentials while bridging the gaps between haves and haves-not and ending deprivation and backwardness. Doing so will contribute to defeat the cause of social tension, discord and conflict.
The utility of education lies on its ability to inculcate positive outlook in human beings. It should also foster moral values. This will enable individuals to judge what is right and what is wrong, where to proceed and where to restrain.

Educating the minds of people will make them better individuals and open newer horizons. But more than that, it should also contribute to the development of societies and nations.

Through education, individuals get enriched. Enriched individuals in turn enrich the families. Enriched families help develop society. Enriched societies contribute to enriching the nations. This, in sum, enriches the understanding among nations at the global level in the interest of humanity at large.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Peace is not a mere absence of war. Nor should it be understood as suppressed calmness, forced silence, and circumscribed tolerance.

It is a state of mind, way of living and has much broader dimensions –individual, political, economic, social, and cultural- which are interdependent and mutually reinforcing.

At individual level, freedom with responsibility towards greater good of society is the foundation of peace.

At political level, meaningful participation in political process and logical power sharing contributes to sustaining peace. A perfect mix of rights and duties fosters an environment conducive to peace.

Likewise, in economic realm, for ensuring peace, the disparities between haves and haves-not and the condition of extractive economic exploitation should be abolished. Joblessness must end. Physical and biological human needs that are basic and justifiable must be met.

At socio-cultural level, tolerance and compassion in society and interfaith and civilizational harmony and unity in diversity are the catalyst for peace.

This perspective calls for promoting the concept of comprehensive democracy that embraces political, economic, social and cultural aspects to empower individuals.

In SDGs’ underlying philosophy of ‘leaving no one behind’, I see an element of social justice. My vision of a comprehensive democracy is also anchored on social justice. So, there is a perfect match between SDGs’ ultimate vision and the objective of this comprehensive democracy I am talking about.
I think research programmes of this University could address the interrelationship between comprehensive democracy and SDGs for detailed analysis. In this regard, my Government is willing to contribute to research activities of the University by sending some students.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

The UN Charter captures the aspirations of people for universal peace – ‘to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war’. To promote and defend these aspirations, both structures to maintain and culture to sustain peace are needed.

The international institutions, rules, UN peace missions, and mediation are among the important tools as far as the structures are concerned.

Sincere fulfillment of moral and legal obligations by all Member States and upholding the values of peace and harmony by every citizen are essential to maintain and sustain peace.

Here lies the important role of peace education.

In this sense, the United Nations has done justice to the core of its mandate by establishing this University.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

For peace to prevail, the first step is to understand and address the root causes of conflict that are of different scope, scale and nature.

Poverty, inequality and backwardness often provide a breeding ground for conflicts. So do intolerance, intimidation and bigotry.

Self-centered parochialism and lack of far-sightedness further aggravate the situation. A myopic and selective approach does more harm than good.

Environmental distress, discrimination, societal discord, deficit of trust and denial of sovereign rights of nations over natural resources also contribute to fueling conflicts.

More study and research of such causes of conflict can help broaden our understanding and anchor the peace universally.

Universities like this have an important role to generate, preserve and transfer knowledge about peace and conflict resolution.

Needless to say, the custodians of peace are the young people. Therefore, their contribution and stake in consolidating peace is paramount, so is their role in defending democracy and championing the human rights values.
When I say this, I recall my days as a young political activist fighting for democracy. In those days of autocratic rule in my country, arbitrary detention and torture were common. I myself was imprisoned for fourteen long years that also included a period of solitary confinement of four years.

In our pursuit of democracy, we never relented, never bowed to authority and never gave up our conscience. Our perseverance and indomitable courage shaped our struggles for political transformation.

Inspired by the universal acceptance of human values, we had numerous struggles and movements for people’s rights and democracy that culminated in the promulgation of a democratic constitution in 2015.

Gender perspective in peace is equally important. Women have an important role to play as agents of peace and harmony.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

The primacy of peace is well established in the teachings of Buddha, who is an enlightened son of Nepal. Born in Lumbini of Nepal, Buddha taught the path of peace and non-violence and his teachings are of eternal relevance to the world.

The relevance and utility of certain things get diminished with the passage of time. But, Buddha’s message is of timeless value. It is as pertinent today as it was in the time of its articulation.

The Charter of the United Nations embraces this eternal and universal message of peace of Buddha.

We find in his teachings an illuminating philosophy for peace.

The essence of Asian philosophy is ‘vasudaiva kutumbakam’, which means the world is one family. Likewise, ‘sarve bhawantu sukhina’, which means all human beings should remain happy, is the core of our welfare vision, derived from long philosophical tradition. The relevance and appeal of these maxims are universal. This philosophy doesn’t discriminate humanity on any ground. Our vision for peace is guided by this philosophy.

Unfortunately, as witnessed in other parts of the world in different times and circumstances, Nepal too experienced a period of armed conflict that was the outcome of the prevailing circumstances and had much to do with dissatisfaction of the people fueled by the lack of opportunities for economic and social development.

However, the political parties of Nepal and the armed rebels managed to come together proactively to resolve the conflict through peaceful means and laid grounds for peace. As a result of a homegrown and nationally led and owned process, a peace accord was signed in 2006, formally Ending the armed conflict. Management of arms and combatants was successfully handled to pave the way for political process.

In the last decade, Nepal has undergone political transformation of historic proportions. We moved from a unitary monarchial system of governance to a federal democratic republican polity, which has now been institutionalized by the new Constitution.

The constitution promulgated by the Constituent Assembly elected by Nepali people, is a forward-looking, progressive and human-rights based document which ensures inclusive and participatory democracy, decentralized federal structure, socio-economic justice and rule of law.

This has marked the conclusion of the uniquely successful peace process. Our conflict resolution experience and the peace process can provide an important case study for research works including in this University.

Our experience is a testimony of the fact that with requisite political will and sense of accommodation, negotiations and dialogue can resolve conflicts.

We must be aware of the elements that seek to drive a wedge between different groups by taking advantage of their differences and discords to perpetuate conflict to fulfill their vested interests. We must resolutely defeat them.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

The historic elections, that were held last year at federal, provincial and local levels not only recorded a high number of participation, but also elected people from all sections of society.

More than 41 percent of women have been elected in the representative bodies at all levels.

Our experience is a testimony of the fact that strong political will and constitutional guarantee can be instrumental in empowering women to ensure their legitimate share as well as in making democracy inclusive.

Having settled the political issues, the history has bestowed on us the greater responsibilities to undertake socio-economic transformation to sustain the political gains we have achieved.

With an overwhelming mandate of people, the government that I head is determined to building on this political transformation and accelerate its drive for prosperity and sustainable development.

Our vision is guided by the long-term goal of “Prosperous Nepal, Happy Nepali”.

To realize this goal, our priority is to ensure decent jobs and gainful employment for our working age population, modernize our agriculture, utilize our energy potential especially in hydropower, and promote development of infrastructure, connectivity, tourism and human resources.
In doing so, we will need investment in multiple sectors. And we have put right policies in place to make foreign investments in Nepal safe and profitable.

Before concluding, I would like to stress the need to promote enhanced collaboration and cooperation between the University for Peace and universities, think tanks and policy institutions of Nepal in advancing the common cause of peace.

When we talk about interrelationship between peace, democracy and development, we must not forget:

– that democracy and development are contingent upon peace.

– that the investment in development will crumble in the absence of peace.

– that aspirations for democracy will evaporate in the absence of peace.

With this note, I would like to thank you, Dr. Francisco Rojas Aravena, Rector, and the entire University fraternity for the Honorary Doctorate as well as this opportunity to share my thoughts.

I wish the University all success in its noble mission.

Thank you.
ADDRESS BY PRIME MINISTER K P SHARMA OLI AT THE UN DAY OF VAISAKH
12 May 2019, Ha Nam, VietNam

Most Venerable Dr. Thich Thein Nhon, President, International Congress Day of Vaisakh
Most Venerable Prof. Dr. Phra Brahmapundit, President, International Council for Day of Vaisakh
Most Venerable Monks
His Excellency Nguyen Xuan Phuc, Prime Minister of the Socialist Republic of Viet Nam
His Excellency President of Myanmar
His Excellency Vice President of India
Excellencies
Scholars

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I have brought warm greetings to you all from the land of Buddha and Sagarmatha; from sisters and brothers of Nepal!

I want to chorus with you- Bhavatu Sabba Mangalam! (May All be blessed to Auspiciousness)
Nepal is a land of wonderful people. The only thing they cherish is friendship with all and enmity with none.

The only thing they wish is peace, not only at their home, but also in the entire world, entire universe.

This fits well into this grand ceremony whose very objective is to foster understanding and harmony in a world that is marred by conflicts, tensions, uncertainties and contradictions. We believe in universal fraternity and harmony to be the guiding norms to govern relationship between states and their peoples.

Truly, this is an unforgettable opportunity for me and my country to be represented in this august UN Vaisakh Day celebration in a country with which we share not only a strong political relationship but equally strong cultural relationship, that brings our peoples closer.

Thank you, Prime Minister Phuc, for the kind invitation and for the warm welcome and generous hospitality.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

No words would capture the essence and importance of this day. On this very full moon day some 2643 years ago, the immortal son of the world, whom we reverently call Buddha, descended to this world. On the same day 35 years later, he achieved enlightenment and finally at the age of 80, some 2563 years ago he assimilated in the eternal peace. Such is the solemnity of the day.

I come from the blessed land where Buddha was born. It was a little hamlet in the southern plains of Nepal, where the seed of Buddhism was sown and its early sapling was nurtured. That was why Siddhartha Gautam gave up his crown princeship, his palace, his lovely wife, a cute and innocent son. He had got something and was willing to get more. Lumbini is therefore not only the birthplace of Buddha, but also the fountain of Buddhism.

Today, this place is the centre of attraction for pilgrims, scholars, researchers and those in quest of the ultimate truth and salvation!

Lumbini is more than this. It was an integral part of Shakya Ganarajya (Shakya Republic) with its Capital in Kapilvastu. It was an advanced city state by all standards of that period. Organized in the principle of republican system of governance, it was a flourishing republic and with a kingship elected by the people and thus governed under the able leadership of Shakyas. The recent excavation establishes the cultural and architectural significance of the Shakya Ganarajya. It was in this very land, the famous philosopher Kapil invented the ‘Sankhya’, known as the philosophy of numbers.

As Buddhism spread to the rest of Asia and the world, transferred alongside was the vast collection of knowledge and wisdom, ideas about life and livelihood, messages about social harmony and universal fraternity.

Today, the shared asset of Buddhism connects countries in Asia and beyond, including Nepal and Vietnam. Many of our people follow Buddhism as their core faith and the rest respect it as a pool of enlightened ideas and source of inspiration.

I am impressed by the great efforts of the people and Government of Vietnam towards preserving and promoting the treasure of Buddhism. I deem this Conference as a landmark in the continuum of the same admirable endeavor.

Dear Friends,

Buddhism has served for generations as the fountain of humanity; as the belief system focused on the quest for betterment of human beings, society and the world.

Like other belief systems, Buddhism, too, talks about the distinction between the worldly and the eternal, the transient and the endless. Yet, the unique appeal of Buddhism lies in its care of life and nature. One does not have to wait for the next life or another world to find happiness. Ultimate joy can be attained by anyone, any time, in this very world, in this very life. For this, we should just discard the hatred, self-interest and violence, and should fill ourselves with the spirit of compassion, fraternity and benevolence.
Buddhism thus seeks to empower people. Buddhism is rediscovery of humanity; disciplining, organizing and transforming of oneself, and, by setting example, transforming the rest of society. Its ultimate aim is to attain harmonious organization of society and world order: order that is based on justice, universal fraternity, peaceful co-existence, and human dignity.

In recognition of Buddhism’s contribution to world peace and harmony, the United Nations, whose very Charter is based on the Buddhist values of cooperation and co-existence, recognized, in the year 1999, ‘the Day of Vaisakh’. Such recognition should be a matter of pride for us.

Most Venerable and Excellencies,

And this is why Buddhism is relevant when it comes to the question of larger global leadership today. In fact, Buddha’s entire life is the testimony of ‘lead by example’. Without second thought, we can say that Buddha was a great visionary leader, who inspired people to shun vices and embrace virtues. He was able to reach the people and communities with love and compassion and lead them on the path of patience and perseverance amidst adversities of all kinds.

Buddha set an example that modesty and humility are the true traits of leadership, not aggression and ego. He passed on to the succeeding leadership the cognizance of the Four Noble Truths and the Noble Eightfold Path. Right view, Right intention, Right action, Right effort, Right speech are as much the fundamental qualities of today’s leadership as they were in the past.

Leadership is about having right vision of destination for society and guiding people on right path. But it is certainly not about being swayed by popular whims and momentary delusions. It is about right intention to bring positive results and serving for larger public good, not self-gratification. It is about creating harmony in society, promoting fraternity and treating everyone with respect and dignity.

Dear Friends,

Generosity and moral integrity are on top of all attributes of leadership that we can draw from Buddha’s teachings. Speaking to his principal disciple Ananda, Buddha made it a point that leadership is self-making, self-driving and self-motivating process.

‘Live and let live’ is the core tenet of Buddhism that immensely contributed to the wider Asian values of caring, sharing and pursuing larger societal good.

These noble traits are antithesis to silo mentality and divisive mindset that are increasingly finding space, particularly in today’s political spectrum in several parts of the world.

Today, society is getting more individualistic, consumerism is overshadowing the human values of auspiciousness and countries are becoming more inward-looking. Rhetoric of exclusion is gaining more traction than the message of inclusion. Short-term transactions are being prioritized at the cost the long-term peace, stability and harmony in the world.

Further, global geopolitics is getting fluid and full of uncertainties. The order that was created and the institutions that were built as modus operandi for countries and communities to work together are losing their hold. Existing multilateral system is under attack. Sense of shared responsibilities is dissipating.

True that we live in a world today, which is more prosperous than ever; wealthier than ever. Yet, one fifth of its humanity still lives under abject poverty, deprived of even the most basic needs, while the world’s military expenditure is getting higher every year.

The idea of economic justice is sounding more alien to us. The objective to realize the Sustainable Development Goals is facing challenge in receiving adequate international support.

Environmental degradation goes unchecked and the very sustainability of the world is under threat, thus posing the very question of existentiality. Paris Agreement on climate change survives amidst an uncertain fate. Terrorism continues to threaten peace and order in societies.

Amidst such disruptions, the core Asian values of universal fraternity, “Basudhaibakutumbakam” (the world is one family), peaceful co-existence and sense of sharing become all the more relevant for today’s leadership. The faithful observance of Panchasheel will serve as an important guide to foster understanding and harmony.

The notion of balance and Middle Path gains even greater significance; notion that demands us to shun excesses, accommodate diversities, find the ground for compromises; a path that world help avoid conflicts and chaos.

In our quest for peace, stability and sustainable future, pathway shown by Buddha always remains pertinent. Buddha’s messages emphasize balance and equilibrium between man and nature, between material and spiritual, between the day-to-day affairs and the perpetual.

Buddhism is strong against the three vices, namely ignorance or delusion (Moha), greed (Raga) and hatred (Dvesha), which are, in one way or other, the main causes of the crises the world is facing even today.

Strong linkage between Buddhism and nature needs no emphasis as everything we understand by Buddhism was systematized and formulated under a Bodhi tree, within the nature. Buddhism is about eschewing excessive desires, including desire for material possession.

As it is often said, famines do not occur due to lack of food; it occurs when there is no justice in distribution; it occurs due to culture of amassing more than what we need. Kindness and compassion are the main virtues to make human beings happy. When the culture of giving, sharing and helping others is predominant, society becomes blissful. In genuine philanthropy, givers and receivers are happy together.

Happy individuals are the key constituents of a happy society. Happiness depends both on the external nature and the inner self and Buddhism has answer to both. One of the treasure troves Buddhism offers for happiness is the art of “Dhyana” (meditation), which is getting increasingly popular. “The Dhyana” (meditation) is the state of concentration of mind which brings mental peace, thus making our physical being healthy and ultimately contributes to the foundation of peaceful society.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

In this conversation about transformation towards peaceful and sustainable society, I feel inspired to share with you some thoughts on the kind of historic transformation Nepal and Nepali society have been able to achieve in recent past.

The home-grown peace process that we accomplished is a rare case and hence a topic of interest for study and research worldwide. Our journey of transformation from bullet to ballot is exemplary one, which is a testimony of how peace prevails eventually. We have not only ended the ten year long armed conflict but also brought the conflicting parties into peaceful political process.

An inclusive democratic constitution has been promulgated by an inclusive body of directly elected people’s representative, replicating the egalitarian Sangha way of Buddhism. Through the Constitution, people’s agendas have been established and a country that once suffered the brunt of conflict and violence is now marching proudly and with high optimism on the path of peace, stability and prosperity. Prosperous Nepal, Happy Nepali is our national aspiration.

Such transformation has been possible in the land of Buddha, land of Peace!

Dear Friends,

Buddha, Buddhism and Lumbini are inseparable. Buddhism cannot be disassociated from Buddha; it also cannot be disassociated from Lumbini. To understand Buddha it is important to understand Lumbini. Visit to Lumbini is, therefore, once in a lifetime experience for those who follow Buddhism and those who admire its grandeur.

The birthplace of Buddha welcomes you with boundless affection.

The Government of Nepal wish to host United Nations Vaisakh Day programme in Lumbini. We are also planning to organize an international conference on Buddhism next year.

I take this opportunity to extend a cordial invitation to you all in Nepal.
To ease your travel, we are going soon to complete the works for the Gautam Buddha International Airport, which is about 20 KM east from Lumbini, and bring it into operation.

Lumbini’s development is in our priority. We have a plan to develop Lumbini as an international Peace City and a revered place for all humanity, for all Buddhists across the world, and for those who have interest and belief in the principles laid by Buddha.

Finally, I wish to thank the organizers for inviting me to speak on such a solemn occasion and on such a pertinent theme. I am grateful to all of you for your presence and patience.

Thank you!
STATEMENT BY PRIME MINISTER MR. K P SHARMA OLI AT THE 108TH SESSION (CENTENARY) OF THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCE

10 June 2019 Geneva

President of the Centenary International Labour Conference,
Excellencies Heads of State and Government,
Director General of ILO Mr. Guy Ryder,
Employers’ and Workers’ Representatives,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

We are gathered here today at a historic occasion

- to mark the centenary of an organization that pioneered in writing the most ambitious social contract in the history of humankind,

- to mark the centenary of the vision and aspiration for a just, humane and equitable world, and

- to lay an equally enduring foundation for the future.

This centenary celebration of the International Labour Organization is a celebration of the rights of the toiling masses to social justice through social dialogue.

I extend warm congratulations to ILO fraternity on this historic occasion.

I feel deeply honoured to be part of this momentous occasion and thank the Director General for the invitation.

I have brought greetings and best wishes from the land of Sagarmatha- the Mount Everest, and Lumbini, the birthplace of Buddha and the fountain of Buddhism, for the success of this Conference.

Excellencies,

The ILO’s Constitution was framed in the ashes of the First World War. It reflected the collective desire and commitment of humanity to peace through social dialogue. It was a testimony that production relations can be transformed through dialogue.
The core principles that ILO advanced, such as equal pay for equal value of work, freedom of association, working hours, adequate wage for living, balance between work and life, and social protection are its unique contributions to human civilization.

These are not ordinary achievements. ILO is a trendsetter of the future.

I would like to mention here two landmark initiatives of the last decade of the twentieth century-Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work in 1998 and the Decent Work Agenda in 1999.

The report “Work for a Brighter Future” of the Global Commission on the Future of Work provides a sound basis for our deliberation.

I believe the report will set a discourse for another quarter of a century.

Development of technology, shifting demography, migration and change in the organization of work are creating new paths to prosperity.

On the other hand, they are disrupting the existing work arrangements.

Technology has replaced traditional jobs, transformed the way we work, and created more innovative workplaces.

Artificial intelligence, automation, robotics, internet, 3D printing and block-chain are bringing profound changes in the way we imagine the work.

The gig economy is providing millions an alternative to work remotely.

However, every change comes with new opportunities and challenges. This provides an opportunity to define that our destiny remains at the human command, but not at the command of technology,

- an opportunity that we handover a liveable planet to our posterity, and
- an opportunity to create a win-win situation through demographic dividend to supplement where human capital is in short supply. In managing the changes, we must keep human at the centre of all.

Investing in people’s capabilities, promoting entrepreneurship and creating decent jobs are critical to cope with the changes.

We must ensure gender equality, strengthen social protection, respect social dialogue, and guarantee rights at work.
As the climate change is raising demands in green jobs, climate actions will be most effective if they begin at the world of work.

Green jobs would be the stepping-stones towards green economy.

Adequate wages and time sovereignty go hand in hand. That is the sign of prosperity and wellbeing of all workers.

Labour is not a commodity. ILO has a role to play that core principles of Philadelphia Declaration are upheld at all times.

Persistent unemployment of youth breeds political instability and engenders poverty. We must end this situation.

Excellencies,

Nepal is endowed with vast natural resources as well as rich demographic dividend. This makes future of the world of work in Nepal highly promising.

We have adopted firm legal and policy reforms to address the dynamic international labour environment.

We have domesticated the provisions of the fundamental ILO instruments to which we are a party. Our laws do not discriminate workers on the basis of their status – regular or irregular, outsourced or contractual and those coming from organized or informal sector.

We redefined the notion of life-long job by social protection to all workers irrespective of their nature of job; ensured fair balance between flexibility and social security; and legally ended the dichotomy of formal vs. informal sector.

This way, we have successfully concluded the process of formalizing the informal sector.

Excellencies,

Nepal’s democratic Constitution is founded on the ideals of equality, non-discrimination, and social justice.

Democracy without economic right and social justice remains incomplete.

Our conception of democracy goes beyond the formalities such as formation of political party, participation in electoral process or enjoyment of the freedom of expressions.

Ours is a comprehensive democracy that empowers individual in all dimensions- political, economic, social and cultural.
Our Constitution embodies social justice, right against exploitation, rights to work, remuneration and social security as well as right to trade union and collective bargaining.

The rights to education, health care, food, housing, culture and language are guaranteed as fundamental rights of our people.

We have enacted a number of implementing legislations to enforce the fundamental rights, including those related to the world of work.

The entire life of an individual is covered by social security system. In childhood and old age, the State provides universal social security. In active age, workers are protected through contribution-based social security. This provision has been incorporated in the Social Security Act.

Last year in November, we launched a comprehensive social security scheme to the working people. This largest ever social security undertaking in Nepal is being implemented through contribution from both the workers and employers, and covers benefits such as unemployment, maternity, sickness, old age, accident, dependent family members, and disability.

For past 25 years, Nepal has been providing old age pension to the senior citizens, and monthly allowances to single women and those coming from the most marginalized section of our society. There has been gradual increment in the amount and coverage of this critical cash hand-out. This year in February, we launched yet another employment based social security scheme under the Prime Minister Employment Program.

This flagship program aims to create jobs, guarantees employment to every working age citizen, provides allowances in case of unemployment, promotes innovation and entrepreneurship, and supports skilling, re-skilling and up-skilling.

To change the production relations, we have introduced new sets of labour laws that safeguard dignity of work, guarantee equal pay for the equal value of work, and ensure flexibility in the world of work.

The Trade Union Act protects collective rights of our workers in line with ILO Conventions 87 and 98.

Excellencies,

Inclusion remains a basic tenet of our polity.

Special measures are in place to ensure inclusion of all sections of our society in the State organs.
One-third representation of women is guaranteed in the Federal Parliament and Provincial Assemblies.

Elections in 2017 have resulted over 41 per cent of women’s representation in elected bodies.

Excellencies,

Enterprises are the drivers of modern economy that provide jobs and implement ILO standards. Our actions should support them to grow, create more jobs, and sustain economy. By jobs we mean the development of entrepreneurship, enterprises, MSMEs, start-ups and self-employment.

Decent jobs for our youths and social security to all are a key to address the job deficit.

Migrant workers are often vulnerable to high recruitment costs, contract substitution, unsafe and unsecured working conditions, and non-compliance of terms of employment.

Nepal being a country of origin as well as destination, we consider that the Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration (GCM) adopted in December last year provides a framework for cooperation.

Our role in the ILO Governing Body and UN Human Rights Council is informed by the basic premises of GCM to make labour migration safe, orderly and beneficial to all.

Dear brothers and sisters,

We have created institutional framework for social dialogue at the federal, provincial, local and enterprise levels.

Through a common platform of Joint Trade Union Coordination Centre, Nepal practices a unique example of unity in diversity of trade unions.

This distinct forum of workers represents all working people in Nepal to engage in social dialogue and promotes their interest in a spirit of solidarity and harmonious labour relations. Presence of tripartite forum at the centre has resulted in improved labour relations that have brought down the labour disputes almost to nought.

The Government ensures employer’s compliance through labour audit that provides an opportunity for reflection, self-assessment and improvement.

Labour inspection and inspection of occupational safety and health are the integral part of labour audit.

The world of work in Nepal has voluntarily evolved a social contract to implement rights related issue and engage in collective agreements to safeguard the interests.
Excellencies,

Nepal’s own democratic struggles drew significant inspiration from the work of ILO as many of our trade union leaders were the torchbearers of resistance against autocracy and pioneer of the democratic movements.

Over five decades of my public life, I have fought for equality and social justice for our people.

The Government under my leadership is focused on realizing the national aspiration of Prosperous Nepal, Happy Nepali.

For prosperity, we need skilled labour. This helps foster prosperity, which should lead to happiness. In this context, we want to define it as- सक्षम श्रमक, समृद्ध नेपाल, सुखी नेपाली – meaning ‘skilled workers, prosperous Nepal, happy Nepali’ to underpin our agenda for decent work, wage and workplace.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

We intend to end all forms of deprivation and exploitation, ensure equitable development and establish a socialism-oriented state as envisioned by our Constitution.

We aim to end the worst form of child labour by 2022 and all forms of child labour by 2025. We are committed to meeting SDGs before 2030, including the SDG 8 composite in all its dimensions.

With this objective in mind, Nepal joined the Alliance 8.7 as a Pathfinder country. To conclude, Mr. President, hundred years on, the preambular words of the ILO’s Constitution continue to resonate in this assembly hall calling for reaffirmation to social justice and lasting peace.

We must meet these ‘moral-minimum’ and move forward to address more pressing issues of our time.

Today is the time to uphold ILO’s founding ideals and demonstrate that they continue to be relevant in furthering the value of human worth, equality, social justice and sustainable future.

Let us deliberate on how ILO can secure its own future and the future of its tripartite constituents.

I am confident, the outcome document of this Centenary event adequately reflects on that important aspect of the organization.

I thank you all.
Chair of the Session,
Excellencies,
Ladies and Gentlemen:

Let me start by thanking the Ministry of External Affairs of India and the Observer Research Foundation for giving me this honour. It is a rare privilege to share my humble thoughts before this distinguished audience.

In its fourth year, Raisina Dialogue has become a great platform for churning of innovative ideas.

Generation and dissemination of ideas has been the outstanding tradition of our region. This region was once the wonderful home of the greatest among human civilizations, far advanced in research, innovation, ingenuity and intellectual artifact reflecting the rich tradition of "वादे वादे जायते तत्वबोधः" or "through discourse, essence can be extracted."

When science and scientific thinking was little known to the world, this region had already produced Vedas and Vedanta; when idea of modern statecraft was still in nascent stage elsewhere, this region had already brought up Arthashastra; when human-centred thoughts were yet to be born, this region already prided itself on Buddhism, the core massage of which is the peace, happiness and welfare of humanity. The uniqueness of ideational pattern of our region is the unwavering conviction on social harmony, discipline, order and larger public good.

Dear Friends,

Much has been said about the changing world order, the shifting paradigm of the world politics, and the rapidly transforming geopolitical milieu around us. Without repeating what scholars and practitioners have already thrashed out so profusely, I wish to make a modest attempt to touch on a couple of questions: what the changing world scenario means for a relatively small country like Nepal, for our neighbourhood and the region; and what kind of global and regional arrangements we would like to see. While doing this, I will also touch upon some aspects of Nepal-India relations today and what these relations would mean for the region and beyond.

Attributes that characterized the world order in the past decades are now covered in the mist of uncertainty. Globalization has been challenged by the very people, who once stood as its determined proponents. Free flow of people, I mean the working people, in fact never happened as restrictions of various nature continued and such restrictions have further been reinforced. What globalization effectively meant was the free flow of goods and services of those who could produce. This pillar of trade globalization seems to be getting shaken today.

Globalization: we may have liked it or not. It has its pros and cons sides. But one thing is true: under globalization, countries were able to uplift unprecedented number of their people out of drudging poverty. Trade exponentially grew; industries expanded; value chains were set up; millions of jobs were created, including in developing countries; and economies were transformed. This was not a small achievement by any means.

There were small players like us who could not reap the full benefits of globalization. We consistently demanded that a level playing field had to be created; an enabling environment had to be there for all to prosper; and the growing economic disparity must be addressed. We continued to voice that no country should be left behind in this historic march towards prosperity. We demanded reform, but we never sought alternative of globalization; never opposed rules-based arrangements of global trade.

Today, the same arrangements face big questions not from us but from the big players, in whose ideas the arrangements were rooted.

Today, technological advancement has brought us closer than ever before and made us more known to each other; but in the mindset, we are getting farther and the border that surrounds us is getting tighter.

Today, the world has become more peaceful than before, but still military expenditure has soared up higher than ever: expenditure that could otherwise have gone for development.

While the world is becoming more interdependent, the challenges ahead require to be addressed with more collective efforts. These include challenges posed by the growing tendencies to weaken multilateralism and collaboration.

While the humankind is making progress to understand and predict the dynamics and adjust with the rule of nature, ironically, we are creating such a situation where unpredictability is prevailing and pre-set rules are being shaken.

What triggered today's anti-globalization wave? Was it the 2008 financial crisis and its associated impacts on day-to-day life in the developed world? Was it the Brexit referendum? Was it some of the ‘costly wars’? If yes, could these have been avoided? Could the respective leaderships have taken an alternative decision that would yield results otherwise? Does leadership just mean catering to the short-term public sentiments or do leaders have responsibility to sway public opinion for a better result and a more collective welfare? Does the world today seriously lack statecraft required to keep things in better order and organized way? These questions are set to irk us as we embark onto this fluid and uncertain transition.

Uncertain because the existing world order stands challenged and the new order is yet to take shape.

Uncertain because the nature, definition and structure of world power is changing but the new power equation does not seem to be fully acknowledged.

Uncertain because the old alignments are fading and the new ones, at times of hitherto unthought kind, seem to be emerging, which are yet to stand solid and as durable.

Uncertain because there is a growing skepticism about tenacity of what was once deemed as universalism and universal values and the alternative values are yet to take shape.

Uncertain because there are still believers in good number that the current wave against globalization and liberal world order could just be transient and we would all soon return to the same ‘normalcy’.

Anyway, geopolitical contest is today’s reality and economy is at the heart of this contest. Unlike in the past, today it is less of ideological divide, more of who gains from what sort of trade and economic arrangements. And such contest has at times tended towards the zero sum game of harming each other. One good thing about today’s contest is that unlike in the past there is less threat of interstate military warfare. Not so good thing, however, is that the contest has sometimes been pungent.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Small countries do not have resources and capacity to be engaged in such geopolitical contestation.

A country like Nepal has always been a firm advocate of rules-based, predictable international order. We are a believer in multilateralism, where we can get our voices heard; problems and challenges recognized; and support be extended. Small countries may not have adequate strength and competence to engage in bilateral deals with bigger players and this is why they cherish the cushion provided by collective negotiations in multilateral and regional forums. Rules-based order is essential for our survival.

We have always been supporter of multilateral institutions like the United Nations. What we have wanted, though, is its reform to reflect the current realities.

We have always supported rules-based trading arrangements under WTO. What we have wanted is a meaningful preferential treatment to less capable, least developed countries like us so that we can catch up.
We have constructively participated in the existing global economic architecture and have demanded that such architecture should be inclusive, democratic and enabling for the most resource-constrained countries. We have stressed that gaps and deprivation must be addressed.

Nearer in the region, we have always been a campaigner for greater regional integration. We stand for strengthening SAARC and BIMSTEC and the implementation of the agendas of BBIN sub-regional cooperation.

Next door, we have always emphasized on the importance of good and harmonious relations between our two big neighbours. When these two rise together, the rise of Asia becomes unstoppable. We were encouraged, in this context, by the positive vibe that last year’s Wuhan summit created. We are of the view that one country’s rise should not be seen as a threat to the other. It could be an opportunity to rise together. The only thing is that right sort of arrangement for rising together has to be there and leaders in the region are capable of getting that ensured.

Having possessed a third of the Earth's landmass and almost two thirds of the world population, mostly young and energetic, Asia is the fascinating combination of economic strength, demography and unique value system. And with the developed and prosperous Asia, the world will be transformed because this will mean the end of the largest chunk of world poverty.

Cognizant of the fact that we can work together in neighbourhood for our mutual benefit and common prosperity, we have been emphasizing the need of a trilateral partnership between our three countries. Such partnership would entail working together for better physical connectivity, deeper economic linkages and greater people-to-people connections.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Nepal pursues an independent foreign policy. Our conduct of external relations is based on a balanced and independent outlook, which is rooted in the historical fact that we were among the few countries that always remained independent, free from any sort of colonial rule. The 28 million Nepali people harbour today an abounding sense of national pride and patriotism.

Patriotism that does not have ill will against anyone: our people have always demonstrated great degree of resilience in times of difficulties and their confidence was never shaken. Amity with all and enmity with none is our motto in foreign policy. We seek to foster relations with neighbours and all friendly countries around the world based on justice, sovereign equality, trust, mutual respect and benefit.

Nepal is a peace loving country and shuns any kind of military alliance.

Distinguished Audience,
In this august forum where we are talking about world’s transformation, I feel tempted to share with you the transformation of historic proportion that Nepal has been able to achieve in the past few years. Unlike the current global transformation towards fluidity and uncertainty, ours has been transformation towards stability and predictability. With the making of a democratic and inclusive constitution in 2015 and subsequent formation of strong elected governments in the centre, provinces and local levels, Nepal has entered into a new phase, where our main quest is growth, development and prosperity.

Past two decades were challenging time for Nepal. First the country went through a decade long armed conflict and then long transition marked by uncertainty about how we are to seek a constitutional settlement of conflicting political perspectives. Success of peace process depended on our ability to reach this settlement. We finally did it thanks to the prudence of our political leadership, perseverance of our people and support and solidarity from international community. We were mindful of the cost of instability: our development was pushed back; we remained in stagnation while others advanced.

Now under Prime Minister Oli’s leadership, we are committed to work in such speed that would enable us to make up for the two lost decades. We have set a development vision with the slogan of 'Prosperous Nepal, Happy Nepalis’. We have the potential and what we need is resources and technology.

We are known for richness in water resource, which we are yet to convert into hydropower; we are known for natural beauty and cultural diversity, due to which our tourism industry is growing.

We are aware that single-handedly we cannot reach the destination of prosperity. We must seek support from our development partners from around the world, including our rising neighbours.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

India is our close neighbour, with whom Nepal's relations have been comprehensive and multifaceted. Our economic partnership is robust and has a long history. India is our biggest trading partner, source of FDI and a main transit country. We are connected by geography as well as history, by our religions as well as culture.

Apart from taking effective measures for the implementation of all the agreements and understandings reached in the past, we have common understanding on the need for reinvigorating the existing bilateral mechanisms to promote cooperative agenda across diverse spheres.

Our enhanced engagements at different levels, in particular in recent times, have contributed to taking the bilateral relations to newer heights.
We cherish India's progress and prosperity. Its accomplishments in many spheres are notable. The wonderful journey of India as a major economic powerhouse is an inspiration for many people around the world and more so in our neighbourhood.

To increase the flow of goods and augment trade between our two countries, we are focused on investing in infrastructures and streamline procedures. We are aware that cross-border connectivity is very important to unleash development potentials and to spur growth.

The importance of connectivity cannot be overemphasized for a landlocked country like ours. With India, we are advancing connectivity by railway and waterways. When I talk about connectivity I recall what Prime Minister Modiji eloquently highlighted, during one of his visits to Nepal, as the HIT formula (highways, information ways and transmission ways). We appreciate in this context a recent positive step taken by India towards making cross border trade of electricity possible. Given Nepal’s hydropower potential and investors’ interest in it, it has long been our demand that cross border trade of electricity be opened up just like other tradable commodities.

Dear Friends,

Back to the world geopolitics again, there is no denial that we all have our respective fundamental national interests that we cannot compromise on. At the end of the day in electoral democracy, we must answer to our people, serve them best and make them happy. It is equally true, however, that there are issues beyond our respective border that we cannot tackle in isolation: issues which our domestic audience is not necessarily aware of and for this reason require correct guidance from leadership. Past experience tells us that global challenges require global solution. At a time when the number and intensity of such challenges have grown manifold, thinking of the world as one is all the more required.

Climate change is one such colossal problem of our time that is staring at us and challenging us if we have the strength, conviction and collective will to find a solution. Reports after reports have forewarned of impending disaster and called for immediate actions. It is disheartening, therefore, particularly for small, vulnerable, resource constrained and least prepared countries like us, to see that the fate of Paris Agreement looms in uncertainty.

Our report card of the Millennium Development Goals was a sort of mixed. We did well with some of the goals while progress in other areas remained illusive. Without collective actions, SDGs will not fare better. Partnership for development is a critical aspect of realization of these internationally determined goals. We are, therefore, concerned about the shrinking development assistance.

As I already said, advancement in information and communication technology has tremendously benefitted us in many ways. This has made us more connected and made us more informed. This advancement has not come without challenge. How are we prepared to address today's cyber anxiety? Cyber or satellite collapse? As a byproduct of ICT appears the challenge of fake news and propaganda. Information empowers people; misinformation betrays. How are we going to enable our people to rightly filter between information and misinformation?

Likewise, how are we going to tackle the challenges associated with the most contemporary scientific advancements? Robots have started to perform many of the jobs humans did in the past. How are we going to create alternative jobs for our people? Are we all prepared for half men, half robot kind of working environment? How shall we address the chasm that will possibly be created among us by Artificial Intelligence? How are we going to manage the possible unmanned military capability?

New forces of division in the form of sectarian violence, religious extremism and terrorism are gaining ground posing huge threat to individual liberty, democratic institutions and rule of law. Are we able to overcome these without collective efforts?

Growing volume of world trade is taking place over the water. How are we going to make the oceans safer? How are we going to prevent maritime conflict? How are we going to ensure that landlocked countries get better access to sea for trade and transit?

Distinguished Audience,

Challenges the world faces today are too big and too many to be overcome by our lone efforts. History is our witness. There has always been a positive correlation between our collective efforts and world's peace and prosperity. Such efforts are more required today.

Let us, therefore, be prepared to correct our obsession with short-term gains and think in a larger perspective of long-term collective welfare.

Let us contribute to build bridges rather than barriers.

Let us act in synergy rather than in isolation.

Let us embrace fraternity rather than narrow communalism.

Let us aspire for a better world where we collectively work for common prosperity; a world which future generation can proudly inherit.

I thank you for your kind attention.
STATEMENT BY HON. MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS PRADEEP KUMAR GYAWALI AT 62ND GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE INTERNATIONAL ATOMIC ENERGY AGENCY

17 September 2018 Vienna

Madame President
Madame Acting Director General
Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen

I begin by congratulating you, Madame President, on your election to the chair of this General Conference. I assure you of my delegation’s full support.

Madame President,

Nepal’s abiding faith in multilateralism emanates from our deep commitment to the principles and purposes of the UN Charter, the values of Panchasheela, and the norms of world peace. We consider that only through dialogues, negotiations and engagements in multilateral setting, the world community can address the global challenges that we in isolation cannot.

As the world becomes increasingly complex, the problems we face become equally intractable. This is where the value of multilateralism, collaboration and cooperation among the sovereign States appears critical to build synergy, muster strength and confront the challenges collectively.

Nepal considers that all three pillars of the United Nations- peace and security, human rights and development- should receive equal emphasis. We believe that advancement in science and technology should contribute to the strengthening of the development pillar of the United Nations.

Almost three years have passed since the UN General Assembly adopted the Agenda 2030 for sustainable development with a commitment to leaving no one behind. This is a fitting time that we deliberate in this important forum how the nuclear science and technology can be beneficially utilized for attaining SDGs. I am glad to note that IAEA has calibrated its activities to facilitate this process and help achieve the goals related to health, clean water, agriculture, nutrition, food security, climate action and access to energy for all. These are critical areas for reducing poverty, sustaining progress and enhancing benefit of technological advancement for humanity. Indeed, with its fundamental tenet “atom for peace and development” IAEA had always captured the very essence of this idea.

Madame President,
We deeply value our membership and partnership with IAEA. Though use of nuclear science and technology is still very limited in Nepal, our joining as a Member State of IAEA in 2008 has broadened our understanding of application of nuclear technology and its utility for socio-economic development. Important innovations in medicine, energy and other industrial applications have been developed through the use of nuclear technology. Countries like ours need technical support for properly utilizing nuclear science and technology for development, building capacity, complying with the safeguard regime and ensuring safety and security of nuclear and radioactive materials.

We have seen good results of the projects in the application of nuclear science and technology for peaceful purposes. Nuclear medicine services have been strengthened and expanded in Nepal. Diagnosis and treatment of cancer disease has become more effective and affordable to the needy and poor.

The cooperation has helped capacity building of Nepali technical experts as well as institutional capacity building of some academic and scientific institutions. Now we are engaging with IAEA to prioritize national programs and projects with a view to sustain the achievements and help implementing SGDs. Last year we had the pleasure to host the Director General of IAEA Mr. Yukiya Amano on visit to Nepal.

Nuclear science and technology should be used only for the peaceful purposes within recognized safeguard framework of IAEA. To give it an effect, in 1972, we signed the Comprehensive Safeguard Agreement with IAEA. Ever since, we have not only adhered to the Treaty provisions but also stood for stringent safeguards measures and IAEA verifications. Nepal has introduced Nuclear Materials Regulatory Directives and has adopted National Nuclear Policy. We are in the process of enacting separate nuclear law to create a sound regulatory framework within the country. We believe that only a robust regulatory framework at the national levels can ensure better nuclear security and safety at the global level.

Madame President,

Nepal strongly believes that the international community, while complying to such frameworks prescribed for the peaceful uses of nuclear technology, should equally espouse the principles of general and complete disarmament of all weapons of mass destruction particularly the chemical, biological, radiological and nuclear weapons. We believe that resources of armaments should be diverted to peace and development. We consider that sustainable peace can be achieved only through dialogues and collaboration, not through armaments. We believe in utilizing science and technology for creating new and fair development opportunities for all.

To confirm this belief, Nepal was one of the original signatories of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons which we ratified in 1970. We are a signatory to the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty. Last year we supported the adoption of the Nuclear Weapons Prohibition Treaty and later we signed it. Ratification process of both of these treaties is being initiated with due priority. We are a State party to the Chemical Weapons Convention and Biological Weapons Convention. We strongly support UN Security Council resolution 1540 and remain fully committed to its implementation. These international regimes not only compliment but also support and sustain the momentum towards non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament with NPT as its cornerstone.

Madame President,

Before I conclude, allow me to briefly update about the uniquely successful peace process through which Nepal transitioned to a state of democratic peace and stability. In the process we concluded a decade long armed conflict peacefully, managed arms and armed combatants and integrated them into the society, restructured the State, empowered women and hitherto marginalized communities, managed diversity and adopted democratic constitution through an inclusive and democratically elected Constituent Assembly and formed stable governments in all three tiers of federal structures through democratic elections. It was a home-grown, nationally led process owned and supported by our people. The peace process has established a culture of dialogue, accommodation, and mutual respect among the stakeholders within the country.

To sustain the political gains and building on the democratic foundation that has been created, we are now focused on attaining economic development with a vision of ‘Prosperous Nepal and Happy Nepali’. This vision is closely aligned with SDGs, and we intend to implement this through promoting investment, propelling economic growth, creating job, maintaining stability, and ensuring social justice, good governance and rule of law.

Excellencies,

In today’s globalized world, no country can walk alone in the pursuit of development and prosperity. Only through partnership, cooperation and collaboration we can collectively reach to that destination. Nepal is keen to forge that partnership for collective prosperity.

I thank you for your attention.
STATEMENT BY HON. MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS PRADEEP KUMAR GYAWALI AT THE ANNUAL MINISTERIAL MEETING OF LDCs

27 September 2018 New York

Mr. Chairman,
Honorable Ministers,
Under Secretary General and High Representative for LDCs, LLDCs and SIDS,
Distinguished Delegates,

At the outset, I commend Bangladesh for its role as chair of the Group of Least Developed Countries for the last three years, leading the Group so successfully, and welcome Malawi as interim chair of the Group.

I also take this opportunity to appreciate the role played by the UN Secretary-General as well as by the OHRLLS team.

Mr. Chairman,

LDCs are the battleground on which the 2030 Agenda will be won or lost. Stakes are high for us. And the cost of non-achievement is even higher.

In implementing 2030 Agenda, the experience till date shows a mixed progress for LDCs. Nepal is localizing the SDG implementation, remains committed to a balanced and robust economic development with a high growth rate.

Only a handful of LDCs are expected to reach the SDG target of at least 7% GDP growth per annum by 2019.

The increasing trade tensions these days hurt the furthest behind most. More than that, it assaults the very philosophy of a rule-based and fair global trade regime.

The structural constraints of poverty, inequality and unemployment continue to impede the pace of progress in LDCs. Adverse effects of climate change, natural disasters and internal conflicts further compound the challenges. Those LDCs, which are also geographically constrained, such as landlocked and small islands, are more vulnerable to these shocks. They bear higher cost of production, transportation and low comparative advantage of their exports.

International community should come forward to ensure market access, remove tariff and non-tariff barriers, lift quantitative restrictions, and help capacity building and technology transfer.
They need financing and investments to conquer poor infrastructures, narrow production and export bases, dismal capital formation, and low factor productivity.

It is high time that all stakeholders, including the international community, deliver on their commitments.

Mr. Chairman,

The priorities of the Istanbul Program of Action (IPOA), re-endorsed by its Mid-Term Review, are critical to the development of LDCs. What we need is a strong synergy between the implementation of IPOA and the 2030 Agenda.

Nepal welcomes the operationalization of Technology Bank for LDCs in Turkey. With this, SDG target 17.8 has been achieved, the first ever target to have been met. The Bank needs to be adequately resourced, so that it can provide much-needed science, technology and innovation support to LDCs.

This year, in its triennial review, the Committee on Development Policy (CDP) has recommended four countries for graduation. It is encouraging that never have so many countries been identified for graduation at a single review.

Still, we fall short to meet IPOA’s aim to enable half of the LDCs to meet the graduation criteria by 2020. A robust response is required to ensure that a greater number of LDCs are prepared for graduation. Most importantly, the graduation must be smooth as well as sustainable.

For many LDCs, the graduation criteria itself fails to capture the reality in its entirety, which deserve a revisit.

Nepal met two out of three criteria for graduation for the second consecutive triennial review this year, but we still have low per capita income. Sustainability of our development progress is a major challenge. As the country is recovering from the disastrous earthquake of 2015 and continues to remain vulnerable to natural disasters, the decision regarding our graduation has been deferred till 2021.

We are now intensifying our development efforts to build ground for sustainable graduation as well as to become a middle-income country by 2030.

Mr. Chairman,

In June this year, the UN Member States adopted a transformative resolution on repositioning of UN Development System. It is our hope that a reinvigorated system works better for LDCs. If the system fails, LDCs would bear the severest of the brunt.
As I conclude, Mr. Chair, I would like to stress that the development path of LDCs should not remain slow, long and vague. The crucial phase of implementing 2030 Agenda as well as IPOA cannot go squandered. The greatest challenge in front of us is resource gap. International support measures should complement our national efforts.

The clock is ticking, and we cannot afford to lose a single opportunity.

I thank you all.
STATEMENT BY HON. MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS PRADEEP KUMAR GYAWALI AT THE 40TH SESSION OF HUMAN RIGHTS COUNCIL

27 February 2019 Geneva

Mr. President
Excellencies
Distinguished Delegates
Ladies and Gentlemen

It is indeed an honour to be back after 11 years since I first addressed this Council in 2007.

I bring warm greetings on behalf of the people and Government of Nepal for the success of this session.

At the outset, let me begin by congratulating you, Mr. President, and members of the Bureau and assure Nepal’s full support.

I congratulate Madam High Commissioner and wish her for a successful tenure of office.

Mr. President,

While addressing the 73rd session of the UNGA last September, the Prime Minister of Nepal Rt. Honourable Mr. K P Sharma Oli had said and I quote, “[W]e hold the view that development, democracy and respect for human rights are interdependent and mutually reinforcing. As a member of the Human Rights Council, we will continue to play our constructive role to deliver on Council’s mandates.” Unquote.

This statement essentially reflects Nepal’s firm commitment to the promotion and protection of human rights at home and constructively contribute to fulfill the mandate of this Council as its member.

We believe in multilateralism with the United Nations at its center. Nepal holds strong faith in the principles and values enshrined in the UN Charter, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other human rights instruments to which we are a party.

We firmly believe in the universality, indivisibility, interrelatedness, interdependence and mutually reinforcing nature of human rights, including the right to development. All human rights must be treated in a fair and equal manner on the same footing and with the same emphasis. Our approach must remain balanced and all human rights must be operational at national, regional and international levels. The rule of law must work at all levels.
Peace and human rights cannot be achieved without attaining inclusive development. We consider that the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and Global Compact on Migration provide wider platforms to advance inclusive human rights agenda everywhere. Faithful implementation of these landmark compacts and other relevant internationally agreed development frameworks is central to the enjoyment of human rights by all.

As we celebrate the centenary of International Labour Organization and the 30th anniversary of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, these milestone events should inspire us to further advance human-centered future of work and the human rights agenda.

Mr. President,

The Human Rights Council and its mechanisms have been playing an important role for the protection and promotion of human rights. The work of this Council should rekindle a hope for all those that look upon us as a voice of conscience. This becomes possible only when we act in unison for all those that deserve our attention. Our commitment and action should speak in harmony.

The Universal Periodic Review mechanism has successfully evolved as a platform of positive international cooperation in the field of human rights. This represents a transparent and fair process for all. We consider that the spirit of cooperation and desire to improve human rights situation everywhere through UPR process should be further promoted. In Nepal, we have been implementing the outcome of second cycle of UPR in earnest under a clear plan of actions.

Mr. President,

Nepal represents a uniquely successful case of democratic political transformation. At the center of this process lies our aspiration to ensure equal rights to all of our people. Therefore, Nepal’s commitment to the universal values of human rights is total. We are a party to all major international human rights instruments, including seven of the nine core human rights conventions. We have internalized those values into our national laws, policies and practices.

The Constitution of Nepal is founded on universally recognized human rights and fundamental freedoms and such other principles as inclusive multiparty democratic polity, pluralism, the rule of law, representative and accountable government, social justice and independent judiciary. Equality and non-discrimination lie at the core of it. The Constitution guarantees special measures that all sections of our society are enabled to enjoy those rights and receive fair share of representation in all spheres of national life, including politics, governance, health, education, employment and social security.

We have put in place requisite legal and institutional arrangements to realize those provisions. The year 2018 essentially remained a year of human rights law making. We accomplished the task of enacting total 16 legislations for the implementation of all fundamental rights enshrined in the Constitution.

The National Human Rights Commission of Nepal confirms to the Paris principle and stands accredited as ‘A’ category national human rights institution for years.

Separate independent and constitutionally empowered Commissions have been established to promote and protect the rights and interests of women, Dalit, indigenous nationalities, Madheshi, Tharu and Muslims. National Inclusion Commission is mandated to ensure that the constitutional and legal provisions are effectively implemented.

True to our commitment, we have all along remained constructively engaged with the UN human rights mechanisms and fulfilled our reporting obligations. Last year alone, three periodic reports of Nepal under CRPD, CERD and CEDAW were considered by the respective treaty bodies. We hosted Special Rapporteur on the Human Rights of Migrants and Special Rapporteur on Violence against Women, Its Causes and Consequences. We have extended invitation to the Special Rapporteur on the Right to Food and are keen on welcoming her to Nepal some time this year.

Nepal was one of the pioneering countries to mainstreaming human rights agendas into national policies and plans through Human Rights National Action Plan. Currently the fourth series of the Action Plan (2014-19) is under implementation and the fifth one is being prepared in tandem with the national development plan for next five years.

Mr. President,

Having firmly set the political course in place, we are resolutely focused on economic agenda with the long term vision of “Prosperous Nepal, Happy Nepali”. We are in the mission of enabling our people to fully enjoy all human rights. Landmark schemes of contribution-based social security scheme, universal health insurance program and Prime Minister Employment Program have been launched.

Forty-five percent of the public sector employment has been reserved for weaker sections of our population. The policy of affirmative action has significantly enhanced their access to education, health services, employment opportunities and political participation. We have been able to bring transformative change in their empowerment and bring them to the forefront of political and development process.

The story of gender equality and empowerment is particularly inspiring. Women now represent 33 per cent at the federal and provincial assemblies, and total 41% in all elected bodies. Nepal currently has a woman Head of State.
Strengthening of national capacity remains our priority. Nepal’s independent judiciary has made contribution to further enrich human rights jurisprudence. We have abolished death penalty and do not condone impunity.

Nepal is a uniquely successful case of nationally owned and nationally led peace process. To conclude the last leg of this process, term of the two independent Commissions- the Truth and Reconciliation Commission and the Commission of Investigation on Enforced Disappeared Persons- have been recently extended to allow time to complete their mandates. We are preparing for the amendment of the laws in consultation with and participation of the victims. There exists a requisite political will to conclude this last remaining task of the peace process in equally unique way. In doing so, we will be guided by the Comprehensive Peace Accord, directive of the Supreme Court, relevant international commitments, concerns of the victims and the ground realities. There will be no blanket amnesty in the cases of serious violations of human rights.

Civil society organizations have been important partners in our development efforts. We value the role of the media and civil society in the promotion and protection of human rights. To conclude, Mr. President, Nepal truly believes that together we can provide a strong voice to all those who look up to the Council and make a positive difference in their lives by upholding the mantle of human rights.

We are a young democracy. We are keen to learn from the wider world, share our own experience in the field, and contribute for the promotion and protection of human rights. Our experience so far in the Council has given much needed confidence to consolidate democracy, peace and human rights in the country. With this in mind, Nepal has presented candidature for the re-election to the Council for the second term 2021-2023 and we count on your support and cooperation.

We know that no country has ever achieved perfection in human rights. What is important is how sincerely and seriously we are aiming higher and better. We consider that Nepal has been consistently doing better and we are genuinely willing to improve further. With this open mind and genuine desire we have come to this session.

I thank you.
Mr. President,
Excellencies, Heads of State/Government and ministers
Distinguished delegates
Ladies and gentlemen,

It is my honour and privilege to participate in the Second High-Level United Nations Conference on South-South Cooperation in the beautiful city of Buenos Aires, which is witness of the important and historic Buenos Aires Plan of Action (BAPA) adopted here 40 years ago. The BAPA Conference in 1978 not only set a bedrock for cooperation among developing countries but also became a synonymous with South-South Cooperation itself.

I would like to join the speakers before me in thanking and appreciating the generosity of the Government of Argentina for hosting as well as for making excellent arrangements for the Conference. We also appreciate the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the UN Office for South-South Cooperation for substantive as well as other preparations.

I also take this opportunity to congratulate you, Mr. President, and other officers on your appointment to lead this important Conference. I would also like to assure you of our full support in discharging your important responsibilities.

I align my statement with the statement of the Group of 77 and China delivered by the State of Palestine.

South-South Cooperation is more relevant now than ever before.

The development landscape has changed significantly. The South has developed an enormous potential for economic transformation. The progress some members of the South have achieved over the decades has not only widened the scope of the cooperation, but has brought us closer towards realizing the purpose of ‘collective self-reliance’. While sharing of experiences and best practices between and among the countries of the South will go a long way, the cooperation needs a more concrete and meaningful form.
This is time to further diversify and strengthen our cooperation: in scale, in scope, in quality and in its effectiveness.

South-South Cooperation, as complementary to and not as a substitute for the North-South Cooperation, plays an important role for the effective and timely implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and other internationally agreed development outcomes such as IPOA and VPOA.

Mr. President,

Let me highlight what cooperation means to a landlocked LDC like Nepal that has just begun an economic transformation to sustain its successful political gains that culminated in the democratic Constitution in 2015. To realize the ambition of the Constitution, the Government has already initiated transformative process in a holistic approach with a resolve of “Prosperous Nepal, Happy Nepali”. 41 percent women representations in the federal, provincial and local elected bodies, introduction of Comprehensive Social Security Program, Nationwide Health Insurance Program and Prime Minister Employment Program among others, are the instruments to achieve prosperity and happiness. We have internalized the SDGs in our national policies and planning. We wish to graduate from LDC stage at earliest and to become middle income country by 2030. There is need of enhanced level of investment to accelerate the economic growth which demands scaled up international cooperation.

We know that those who have a long journey to travel should walk fast. And we are prepared to walk fast and catch up with fast growing economy.

But we are not alone in this journey. We are confident that international cooperation and partnership, including South-South cooperation, are important components in realizing our national development goals and objectives.

Mr. President,

Lastly, allow me now to highlight four important principles for my country:

- First, some members in the South despite being similar development ambitions are far lagging behind. They need even more understanding, partnership and cooperation. Principle of ‘leaving no one behind’ should be placed at the core.

- Second, our cooperation should have a focus, a clear focus on poverty eradication. SDG 1 is the biggest battle we have and perhaps the most cross-cutting, and therefore a sine qua non for making the world a better place to live.

- Third, gender equality, inclusiveness, concrete steps to mitigate the adverse effect of climate change and the social justice, among others, should be the guide posts of development perspectives. Women and youths should be assured for better opportunities and more investment must be guaranteed in education and technological innovations.

- Finally, our development experience tells that all forms of cooperation should respect national ownership and leadership, and focus on country needs and priorities. And global peace and stability is the prerequisite, because cost of conflicts mainly goes on the shoulder of Global South.

To conclude, Mr. President, I reiterate Nepal’s call for meeting commitments, forging partnerships, increasing cooperation and redoubling our efforts, including through the South-South Cooperation, to support the countries that need the most. Nepal is ready to work together with all fellow member states and all stakeholders to this important end.

I thank you.
